

Home tour

The 22nd Annual Marshall Historic Home Tour will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 7, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 8. There will be eight private residences built between 1835 and 1870 open for visitors along with three restored downtown commercial buildings, 1834-1859, the Honolulu House and the GAR Hall museums. The Wilcox home above is on the tour for the first time. An Italian villa, it was built in 1870.

OU performance series opens Oct. 6

Subscription series tickets for the Oakland University Center for the Arts 1985-86 season are on sale. Ten theater, dance and musical events are scheduled. Subscribers also receive bonus tickets for two events especially designed for children.

Season tickets at $35 represent more than a 20 percent savings from the regular adult admission price. Subscription series tickets are available only until Oct. 1. After that date, individual tickets will be sold.

The Pontiac-Oakland Symphony will open the series at 3 p.m. Oct. 6. David Daniels of the OU department of music, theater and dance will conduct. Bass John Paul White of the department will be the featured performer.

In "False Magic," Oct. 31 to Nov. 17, T. Andrew Aston of the department will direct 10 performances of what is believed to be the world premiere of William Menzies' 17th-century play.

The play has been translated from Latin by Brian P. Copenhaver, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and John C. Coldewey of the University of Washington.

Chicago Jansdances Company is scheduled for 8 p.m. Nov. 22. Modern and jazz dances will be performed by this troupe.

"Man and Superman," will run Dec. 5-15. Adeline Hirschfeld-Medalla of the department will direct 10 performances of this George Bernard Shaw drama. Meadow Brook Estate Holiday Concert will be Dec. 6-8. Michael Naylor will direct this popular group of singers and dancers from the university's commercial music program.

Pianist Flavio Varani will perform at 3 p.m. Jan. 12. An OU music faculty member, he has performed throughout the world to favorable critical reviews and is a frequent guest performer in the metropolitan area.

"Wayside Motor Inn," is on stage Feb. 7-23. Yolanda Fleischer will direct this murder-mystery by Albert Ramsdell Gurney. Nine performances are slated.

The J.C. Heard Orchestra, will play at 3 p.m. Feb. 16. Marvin "Doc" Holladay, saxophonist of the OU faculty, will be a featured performer. OU Dance Theatre is on stage March 27-29. Carol Halsted of OU dance faculty, will direct four performances. Unlike a dance recital, the dance theater will include costumed dancers on specially designed sets.

"Carousel," June 13-22, will be performed seven times. Aston will direct the Rodgers and Hammerstein classic.

The special children's events are the OU Concert Band Children's Concert at 3 p.m. March 9, with music faculty member James Dawson conducting, and "Zoophabreaks," at 1 p.m. April 21.

25 by The Mime Ensemble with Aston directing.

Prices for single event tickets, on sale Oct. 1, will be $6 for the Pontiac-Oakland Symphony, $2 for the Concert Band Children's Concert and $4.50 for all other programs.

As a special offer for subscription series ticket holders, discounts will also be available for the Pontiac-Oakland Symphony's season tickets.

To order series tickets, send a check, payable to Oakland University, to the Center for the Arts box office, 138 Varner Hall, Rochester, 48063. For further details, call 370-3013.

Gardeners to give talk

Master Gardeners Fred and June Rosvold will speak at 8 p.m. Monday, Sept. 9 at the Town & Country Organic Garden Club, Salvation Army Church, 3015 N. Main, Royal Oak.

Their information will help gardeners grow vegetables into the fall and early winter and the talk will be supplemented with slides and handouts.

Refreshments available at 7:30 p.m. Nominal donation for visitors. Regular meetings are the second Monday of the month.

Woodland Indians art to exhibit at DIA

"Ancient Art of the American Woodland Indians" opens at the Detroit Institute of Arts Thursday, Sept. 5 and continues through Sunday, Nov. 10.

Some 150 works — stone sculpture, ceramics, copper tools, weapons, ornaments and ceremonial objects — define the cultural history (3000 B.C. to A.D. 1500) of the Woodland inhabitants, ancestors of present-day Native Americans.

THE ARTIFACTS, significant as cultural and archaeological objects, as well as works of art, were discovered largely through archaeological exploration over the past 100 years.

Early discoveries were made by explorers in the 1800s and found their way into museums and private collections. Additional finds have been made as recently as the past five years.

The Woodland region extends from the Atlantic coast to the western prairies and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. The exhibition explores the Late Archaic, Woodland and Mississippian periods of the Woodland area.

During the Late Archaic period (3000-1000 B.C.) societies organized into bands or extended family groups roamed in search of seasonally available food and moved toward settlements in major river valleys.

The exhibition begins with the artistic products of this period: copper tools and weapons, imaginative pendants and ornaments, and "bamboo-stones" which served as weights on the shaft of a spear-thrower. These colorful stone objects, with polished surfaces and precise contours, have a curiously contemporary appeal.

DURING THE second Woodland period dating from 1000 B.C. to A.D. 900, the Indian cultures extended their settlements in river territories and came to rely more on local resources for food and other necessities. Trade with other communities expanded across the continent. Materials acquired in trade, such as copper, shell and mica, were incorporated into ceremonial objects portraying serpents, birds, bears and other animals considered spiritually potent.

On Friday, Oct. 18, Native American scholars, artists and speakers will attend sessions at the DIA, part of the three-day (Oct. 17-19) conference of the Native American Art Studies Association. The event is open to the public. Call Linda Salavaria 833-1432 for information.
