Senior highs join to publish newspaper

By Judith Doner Berne stall writer

Newspaper editors from nine area public and private schools are banding together to produce an interschools newspaper called "The Perspective."

The project is the brainchild of Joe Hagt, editor of the Brother Rice Chief-tain, who hopes the paper will help re-duce tensions among schools

He and his fellow editors are looking for advertising support from local mer-chants and companies to pay printing cysts. The group, which has formed the Literary Inter-Scholastic Press, is hop-ing to publish 11,000 copies.

. "During my four years at high school. I have seen bitter feelings be-tween area high schools that have often resulted in vandalism, threats and fights." Hart told the editors.

"THE MAIN goal of the paper is to bring about an awareness of the simi-larities between the schools and stu-dents, thus uniting the schools under a common bond and alleviating much of the tension prevalent among students.

"In addition, the paper would serve as a place for writers to express themselves and display their clients before their peers." he said. "It would increase interest!" Journalism and more importantly, provide an opportunity for students of other schools to work with each other."

Articles will include analyses of why student councils work at some schools and not at others, impressions by a student from one school spending a day at another school and film and record reviews.

Besides Hart, participating editors and their schools are: Katle Barret, Birmingham Groses; Katly Kress and Julie Hoogerwerf, Birmingham Martian: Mike Kirvan, Bloomfield Hills Andwer, Jamie Williams, Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook-Kingswood: Lork Krause, West Bloomfield Dan Shakespear, Redford Catholic Central; Sheila Herberholz, Farmington Mercy; and Tom Cooney, Royal Oak Shrine.

BUT IF the participants can raise the projected $2,100 — and the paper is a success — Hart hopes it can be ex-panded to other schools, and that Scaholm and Lahser will decide to join

He mentioned in particular South-field High, where he says "The South-field Jay is the best high school paper I've seen."

The hardest part so far has been get-ting all the students together. Hart said. Meetings have been held at Brother Rice, but if more issues are forthcoming, he wants other schools to host it.

"I'm not out to take the leadership position," said Hart, a senior who lives in West Bloomfield. "I want everyone to be a part of it. In my mind, I've got long-term plans on how to establish it and keep it going over the years."

the newspaper project with editors from publi

Surplus food available

Surplus commodity food will be given out from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday, Security card, proof of income for the Dec. 10. in St. Alexander in S

