How One Group Helps Disturbed Youngsters

Days have been brightened lately for students at Hawthorn Center, a Northville state school for emotionally disturbed children.

The reason: Members of the Detroit chapter of the Michigan Association for Emotionally Disturbed Children (MAEDC) have taken it on themselves to visit the school to cheer the kids up.

Recently Walter Voss, executive vice president of Detroit chapter of MAEDC, took Tiger catcher Bill Freehan out to Hawthorn to entertain the youths.

"The visit had a two-fold purpose," said Voss. "I was anxious to review the Hawthorn facilities, and I figured since the Tigers were in town it was a splendid opportunity for the youngsters to meet Bill Freehan personally. I am sure they enjoyed it."

Voss said the purpose of the Detroit chapter of MAEDC is to improve and expand services for children suffering from emotional and learning disorders.

The chapter is funded by United Fund and private contributions, and its activities include direct services to children as well as public education and community planning projects.

"There are 14 chapters of MAEDC in the state," Voss explained, "and they are all doing a good job. But they need more money. They need the cooperation and individual effort of every facet of our society."

Voss said the MAEDC strives to supplement the state program for emotionally disturbed children.

"We can't turn the whole job over to government and expect to solve everything with a few more tax dollars," declares Voss. "We have a fine organizational structure in MAEDC and they have an outstanding record of accomplishments. But the youth mental health problem is reaching alarming proportions. Unless, we, as individuals, are willing to give more of ourselves than lip service, I think we are headed for big trouble."

VOSS POINTED OUT that experts estimate that one out of every 10 children will need psychiatric treatment or a special-learning program between infancy and graduation from high school.

"This means that 350,000 Michigan children need our help now, or will need it soon," declares Voss. "This is a terrible indictment on our society. Somewhere we are failing badly in our individual responsibilities to youth."

Voss said individuals or groups who want to help emotionally disturbed children should get in touch with MAEDC at 663 Fallister, Detroit, 48202.
