

Cable TV turns spotlight on peace film

Thirty cable stations (serving 88 southeast Michigan communities with 783,100 potential viewers) will show an award-winning peace film Sunday and Monday, April 27-28.

In the Farmington area, it will show at 6:30 p.m. Monday, April 28. Afterward, Metrovision of Oakland County, the local cable company, will host four guests, all peace movement activists, who will field questions during a live call-in special scheduled for 7-8 p.m.

The ad hoc network was the result of the persistence of the Peacemaking Committee of a small church in Troy, Northminster Presbyterian, with support of United Cable Communications.

The Northminster Peacemaking Committee has organized local in-home viewer/discussion groups throughout the area.

"We feel we'll have more impact if we can get people to not only sit down and watch the show but also discuss their feelings about it," said Susan Taylor, committee member.

CABLE STATIONS will host live presentations with varying formats. Metrovision of Oakland County, which serves Farmington, Farmington Hills and Novi, will host a panel and have a call-in format for discussion.

MetroVision of Oakland County (Channel 12) will follow the film, "No Frames No Boundaries," with Community Upeat, a locally produced community-access show hosted by Sharon McDonald and Keith Levick.

The hourlong "live" show will include several guests. Among them are two prominent peace activists, like Krasner and Kathleen Conway.

The show will include a studio audience and call-in questions from the viewing audience.

If you are interested in being a part of a "live" audience, call Community Upeat for reservations at 1-881-5106.

The film, produced by "Beyond War," a California-based peace organization, suggests that artificial boundaries built up between cultures are ripe for reconsideration and attempts to help people understand the complexity of nuclear war. It offers a broader perspective on nuclear armaments.

INCLUDED is a skit that dramatizes the concept of choices. The Atomic Comics' San Francisco-based Fran Peavy and Charlie Varon perform as God and Gabriel — reacting to a nuclear holocaust.

A closing segment to follow the film was produced by Jo-Anne Westerby, with John Hammond, program director for United Cable. Frank Joyce of WDET (Detroit's public radio station) hosts guests Dr. Molly Hayden, guest co-chair of the Detroit chapter of Physicians for Social Responsibility, and Fred Miller of the Detroit Freeze. They offer suggestions for local involvement in the peace movement.

Julie Sigler, the committee member contacting the cable program directors, said, "This film offers a new twist to the arms controversy." What has made this professionally produced unit so interesting to people in general and cable systems specifically is that it presents the nuclear arms race from a different perspective, Sigler said.

"It's a visually stimulating film or our time — perhaps just in time," said Bill Griffin, another committee member. "Films like 'The Day After' were so shocking that it left many people feeling powerless. We're trying to show people that we aren't powerless — we can work together and we can make a difference."

THE FILM'S title, "No Frames, No Boundaries," is from a quote by Apollo 9 astronaut Russell Schweickart, who said, "When you go around the earth, you can't imagine how many borders and boundaries you cross. From where you see it, the earth is a whole, and it is so beautiful. There are no frames, no boundaries."

"What attracted me about the film was the wholeness of it. It seemed to cover every possible angle — it seemed to be addressing everyone," commented Suzanne Walsh from Hamtramck after previewing the film.
