

Timber Cut, Provides Cash, Food For Deer

LANSING — Timber cuttings in state forests of northern Michigan bulled ahead to new volume and revenue records during the 1969-70 fiscal year to give this state's economy a $109-million shot in the arm and provide improved food supplies for an estimated 100,000 deer, reports the Dept. of Natural Resources.

Commercial logging operations carried out under 1,305 cutting permits during the last fiscal period produced 226 million board feet of timber for the wood-using market. The latest level of output, amounting to 70 per cent of the annual allowable cut on northern state forest lands, tops the previous high of 209 million board feet harvested during the 1967-68 fiscal year.

Timber-cutting receipts paid for state forest stumpage during the 1969-70 fiscal year rose to $1,170,000, also a record. The previous high for those revenues, $1,086,000, was set during the 1966-67 fiscal year.

A breakdown on the estimated economic impact of the latest cuttings pegs $104 million in income from pulpwood production which rose to 432,000 cords. Sawlog harvests accounted for another $4 million flowing into Michigan's income circles. Rounding out the picture was $1 million worth of business generated by the output of cedar bolts, poles, chemical wood, and other miscellaneous products.

DNR game men estimate that 100,000 deer have gained food relief and will continue to benefit for several years from logging operations which took place within 150,000 acres of northern state forest land during the latest fiscal year. Of that total acreage, about 59,000 acres were actually cut, with part of the logging done in and around deer yards to boost food supplies for whitetails.
