It's horrifying

The Broadway musical hit "Little Shop of Horrors," continuing through Sunday, May 31, at the Birmingham Theatre, is all about a flower shop in Skid Row and a little plant that grows into a big monster. (Above) James Stoval performs behind the scenes as the voice of the plant called Audrey II. (Top right) Marsha Waterbury is Audrey, in this scene introducing Peter Edmund Haydu (center) as Orin, her sadistic dentist boyfriend, to Stuart Zagnit as Seymour, who raises the wayward plant. (Lower right) Jonas Cole, who manipulates the plant, isn't seen by the audience during the show, but he looks out here during a rehearsal. For ticket information, call the box office at 644-3533.

Sunday Social
Wyn and Harold Landis of Southfield, who have been catering parties since 1955, are turning the tables and inviting their clients to a 3-5 p.m. "Special Sunday Social" on June 7. Guests are being asked to bring a photo of their Landis-catered party for the couple's memory book. For more information, call the Landis' Party Line at 569-2814.

Lunch program
A "10 to 1" lunch program has been introduced at Trappers Alley in Detroit. For every 10 lunches purchased, the 11th is free. Cards are available from participating food vendors. Applications for Preferred Customer Cards, good for discounts on valet parking and shopping, may be picked up at Trappers Alley.

Summer menu
A new menu geared to the spring-summer palate has been introduced by Chef Duglass of Restaurant Duglass in Southfield. Cold soups include gazpacho, vichyssoise and tomato herb bisque, each at $3.
