Humphrey:

"Rioting, burning, sniping, mugging, traffic in narcotics and disregard for law are the advance guard of anarchy, and they must and they will be stopped! I call you, the American people, not to a life of false security, false promises and ease, but to a new sense of purpose, a new dedication and a new commitment."

Nixon:

"We've had enough of big promises and little action. The time has come for honest government in the United States of America. It's time to restore respect for the U.S. It is time we started to act like a great nation around the world. I do not promise the millennium in the morning. But I do promise action—a new policy for peace, progress, justice."

Wallace:

"I recommend states rights and local government, and territorial democracy . . . I'd give my moral support to the policemen and firemen of this country—these college professors who are making speeches advocating victory for the Viet Cong Communists—I would deal with these people as they ought to be dealt with, as traitors."
