SARAF A

Mike Sarafa has taken his campaign right past the politicians and placed it in the hands of area voters.

But he knows that yard signs and knocking on doors are no good if they aren't replaced with hard work and real results for the people of our community.

This Tuesday, August 2nd, join your neighbors who are convinced that Mike Sarafa is the breath of fresh air that Lansing so desperately needs.

You'll be glad you did.

Area women honor others for efforts

Four times a year, Farmington Area Community Women honor one of their members for dedication given to the job, or jobs, at hand. Sue Osandulsky took the honors for the months of December, January and February of this year.

During the holiday season, Osandulsky chaired the party for residents in Oak Hill Nursing Home's annex and simultaneously co-chaired the dinner meeting for the club's members. She also co-chaired "Christmas Gifts for Needy Children," a project that culminated with gifts distributed to 160 youngsters in the community.

"This was at the same time work for the annual Lunch With the Easter Bunny and work toward the distribution of Easter food baskets was beginning, and she worked on those projects.

She served as standing chairwoman to provide refreshments for the general membership meetings for the entire year and is now chairing the Community Service Fund and is on the committee for the Baby Beautiful contest.

She was installed internal vice president this summer for the 1988-89 season.
