

Want to follow a black bear?

MANY of our fears of wild-life result from misinformation. The more we learn about animals and plants the more we come to respect and appreciate them.

A recent study of black bears in northern Minnesota shows that our long-held belief that they are "ferocious" is not entirely true. Different species of bear behave differently.

Grizzly bears will attack to defend their young. Female black bears with cubs neither attacked, nor made contact with, a researcher who followed them within a few feet for 24-hour periods during the summer.

OUR CONCEPTS about animals are often too generalized and should be reserved for only that species which was studied.

These same researchers even took food from a black bear for examination and were not mauled or injured. The bear charged, in an effort to intimidate the researcher. But when the investigator held his ground, the bear eventually walked away.

Grizzly bears will, however, protect their food.

This kind of research is being done to learn more about what does provoke occasional attacks. If we learn what is normal, we can learn about what is causing the abnormal.

Following a bear around the woods at close range may sound crazy, but it has produced a tremendous amount of information regarding the behavior and requirements of wild animals.

O&E Classifieds work!

Grizzly bears will attack to defend their young. Female black bears with cubs did not, in a Minnesota study. Can you tell the difference?

Continued work on the Kirtland's warbler by dedicated people has probably kept this species from extinction. Years of research on its northern Michigan breeding range have yielded enough information to allow man to maintain the popula-

College night set at OCC

High school Juniors and seniors and their parents can talk with faculty and staff of Oakland Community College during College Information Night Thursday, April 13.

The biannual event runs from 7-9 p.m. in the Physical Education Building on OCC's Highland Lakes Campus, 7350 Cooley Lake Road, Union Lake. There is no admission fee.

The program is aimed at high school students who are undecided about their college or career plans. The students and their parents will be able to question OCC staff members from all campuses about financial aid, tuition, programs of study, transfer programs, admission and registration, counseling, student services and more.
