Preparing for the 21st century

As the year 2000 approaches, he says, "There will come a watershed in human evolution, an epoch that will redefine our values and purpose as individuals and as a species.

"Magna Carta Institute is creating the foundation that will support the transition Americans will make as they redefine their place — and power — as human beings in the 21st century."

THE INSITUTE is dedicated to the development and realization of individual, human growth. Its pur-pose is to make a meaningful differ-ence by providing "Positive Life" in-

Peggy Teshka, educational services director for Magna Carta, talks about the importance of keepingpace.

"In 1970 bunnet nkowledge was said to double every 10 years. By 1980, every five. It's already been established that by the '995 our knowledge base will double every two years.

"Don't fool yourself for a minute that your life tomorraw will resemble what it is today. Technology is a tremendous power. It has and will continue to change social and commit systems. We must keep pace with it," she said.

GRIFFIN DESCRIBES the students who come to Magna Carta as "people who look ahead, not back." And, as those who believe "we are all ultimately responsible for our

He believes that when that destiny is reached is not important. How that destiny is reached and the way one lives, is important.
"The decade of the '90s opens a new American frontier," Griffin said. 'It is a place in which our future is still at odds with our past. However, it is also a time in which our potential to attain unpreceded knowledge, leatils and happiness is neither a memory nor a dream. "It is a reality."
Inquiries about Magna Carta or the spring classes are taken by calling the institute at 489-4030.

If tradition holds, between 12 and 15 hopefuls will put in their applications and a corps of volunteers will go to work preparing the contenders in a series of workshops so they will be putting their very best foot for-ward on pageant night.

Simultaneously still other volun-teers will be working backstage on the many and varied facets that hold to the Miss America pageant rules while making the local production a spectacular, in imitation of the Miss American Scholarship Pageant eve-ry September.

"It is a lot of work," said Sarah D'Ascenzo, who is in the throes of re-organizing the 13-year old Miss Farmington pageant by setting up a board of directors and beefing up the board of directors and beeing up use volunteer corps.

She needs persons with business backgrounds, marketing experience, theatre backgrounds, choreogra-phers, anyone who can help in stag-ing a production.

"Whatever capacity a volunteer can help us in, we can use it," she said.

D'Ascenzo took over the executive directorable of the pageant two years ago because, she said, of the help it gave her daughter in launch-ing her career and how important the title has been to other young girls who have won it.

Rozanne D'Ascenzo was Miss Farmington in 1982.

Sarah D'Ascenzo will take calls of inquiry from potential volunteers at 681-2048 or 365-5200.
