'CURTAIN GOING UP'

Community theater groups in Observerland are busy these evenings rehearsing or opening their fall attractions. Hours of hard work and concentration go into these local productions and they provide local audiences with many a worthwhile hour of entertainment at a modest cost.

The Livonia-Redford Players Guild are consulting history books, geographical pamphlets, and memorizing the lovely lyrics that pervade the musical score of "The King and I." Rodgers and Hammerstein wrote some memorable tunes for "King and I"; remember "Shall We Dance," "Getting To Know You," or "Whistle A Happy Tune?"

Jerry Sina, fresh from his triumph last season in the Guild's "Barfot in the Park," is practicing his regal ways as he has been given the choice role of The King. Yul Brynner played that role on Broadway and stopped the show nightly with his "Puzzlement" number.

The Farmington Players will be opening Nov. 1 with "Mary, Mary." The intimate surroundings of their cozy theater gives a special quality to any play they choose to perform.

The Wayne Civic Players began their season with "Cloud Seven." Later on this year they will be doing "On Dad, Poor Dad." Livonia-Redford Players' Guild will be ending their season with the same play.

THIS DUPLICATION of plays within Wayne County raises a knotty problem of scheduling.

Local Coeds Cast In UM Production

Two students from Farmington will appear in the University of Michigan Players' production of Euripides' "The Bacchae," Oct. 2-5, in Truist Theatre in Ann Arbor.

Bonnie L. Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Britton, 34234 Northwick Rd., Junior at the University of Michigan, Miss Britton has appeared in a number of Student Laboratory Productions sponsored by the Department of Speech during the winter of 1968. This will mark her first appearance with the University of Michigan Players.

Even Oaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Saeed Oaker, 29861 Woodbrook Rd., a junior at the University of Michigan, just appeared with the Players in their production of Strindberg's "Ghost Sonata."

Color Peak Next Week In U.P.

Early-bird autumn color viewers will have their first good chance to see Michigan's annual change from summer green in limited areas the weekend of Sept. 28, according to the Michigan Tourist Council.

Council observers report that color in the upper peninsula will be near 50 per cent of maximum during the coming weekend, with peaking conditions in that area expected about the weekend of Oct. 5.

Some areas in the northern section of the lower peninsula expect good viewing during the coming weekend with impressive colors predicted in the reg-lies of Petoskey, Gaylord and Alpena.

Michigan color tour planning information is available without charge from the Michigan Tourist Council, Stevens T. Mason Building, Lansing, 48926.
