Kudos for Julia, 'Romero'

For most of us who lead relatively secure lives in which violence is a crowded freeway, the latest alsaher movie of TV cop abow, "Romero" (A, PG-13, 105 minutes), this week's major release, is a frightening, disturbing and provocative experience.

As well it might be, for we live in a world where money and power are more important than the humanistic values to which we pay lip rather than real service. Money talks and it talks with a viclous tongue.

Nowhere is this more true than Central and South America where

Nowhere is this more true than in Central and South America where recent decades have been characterized by brutal official repression of peasant and worker efforts to achieve decent living standards. The 'motion picture is capable or vividiy portraying life as it is being lived — but it soldom does. There have been very few motion pictures about Central and South American rightist repression — "The Official Story" and "The Kiss of the Spider Woman" are two major and very worthy examples.

The latter featured Raul Julia whose maisterful performance in the

Raul Julia develops this graduar adiocalization of Archbishiph Romero with great restraint and vastily underplays the role to achieve a tre-nendeusly touching polganney, as effective as one can imagine.

DFT widens with 'Scope

By John Monaghan special writer

When CinemaScope came to the movie screen in 1953, it was just another gimmlek to get people away from television and back into movie theaters. But where 3-D and Cinema proved limited, 'Scope still remains a vital part of many filmmaker's visions.

When shown on television, most wide screen movies are cropped to fit the dimensions of the small screen. As a result, you only see about ½ of the original image in a "letterboxed" format.
Elliot Wilhelm considers this as much as travest as colorization.
