Orchestra hosts fund-raiser recital

Birmingham-Bloomfield Symphony Orchestra, BBSO, will be playing all of its classical and pops concerts under one roof this season. That's a departure from past seasons when concerts have been given at two sometimes three locations.

Temple Beth El of Bloomfield Township is the setting for classical concerts will be given in the main sanctuary and the pops concerts in Handelman Hall where tables of 10 will be set up to accommodate the cabaret style atmosphere.

To launch this unified concept, there will be a fund-raiser/15 year birthday celebration in Handelman Hall 6-8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 24.

Guest artist Fedora Horowitz, pianist, will give a recital on the Bosendorfer, courtesy of Evla Music of Bloomfield Hills. Refreshments will be provided by Norman's restaurants.

The best of the BBSO tapes will be presented to Stephen Kershner, director of the Birmingham and Bloomfield Township public libraries.

Tickets, $25, for the evening of music and refreshments are available through the BBSO office, 645-BBSO, Temple Beth El is at 14 Mile and Telegraph, Bloomfield Township.

Pianist to perform for Music Study Club

Music Study Club of Metropolitan Detroit will open its season at 12:15 p.m. Tuesday with a performance by pianist Neil Eisenstein at Birmingham Temple of Farmington.

Eisenstein grew up in the Detroit area and studied with Mischa Kotler. After graduation from Cranbrook, he earned a bachelor of music degree from Berklee College of Music in Boston and a master of music degree with honors from New England Conservatory. He is on the faculty of Center for Creative Studies Institute of Music and Dance in Detroit. His program will include works by Balokov, Liszt, Rachmaninov and Lisapunov.
