

Schostak Brothers realigns corporate structure

Schostak Brothers & Co., the Southfield real estate development, management and commercial/industrial company, has realigned its corporate structure and promoted five employees to vice president.

Carolyn Mansfield, as director of legal services and risk management, will oversee the legal services provided by outside law firms and coordinate insurance matters for the company.

Angela Mader, as director of corporate finance, will arrange financing for the company and provide investment analyses of development opportunities and acquisitions.

Lori Schechter, as director of corporate accounting, will manage all internal accounting and financial reporting.

Joseph Thomas, as director of property management, will oversee Schostak's shopping centers in Michigan.

Robert Zechner, as vice president of development division, will direct initial design and development of future and existing commercial properties for the company.

Thomas J. Riley has been named leasing representative for the retail strip centers in the metro Detroit area of Schostak Brothers.

Riley had been the owner/operator of a men's and women's fashion store in Lapeer for the past 12 years.

Joseph M. Stout Jr., a project manager for Smith, Hinchman & Grylls, has been elected a vice president by SH&G's board of directors. Stout of Southfield is currently managing a biomedical research project for BASF Corp. in Massachusetts.

Dale H. Clark, Louis Hartman and Jeffrey R. Zakas have been named principals at the architectural, engineering and planning firm of Harley Ellington Pierce Yee Associates, Southfield.

Clark and Hartman are assistant directors of mechanical engineering. Zakas is project administrator.

Phillip H. Stiferman has joined Schostak Brothers as a leasing representative of its retail centers, specializing in its Indiana properties.
