So let it rain

Probably no one has immortalized the trench coat more than film great Humphrey Bogart. Who can forget the scene from "Casablanca" — him in his trench coat, the collar upturned and saying goodbye to Ingrid Bergman in his own memorable style — through the decades?

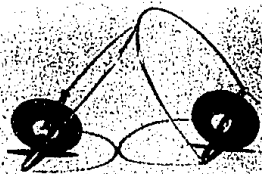

Dolles, Mountbatten, Sam Spide, Garbo and Dietrich, Bill Hader, Laurence Olivier, Edward R. Murrow, Papa Herringway, Lauren Bacall, a rumpled Peter Falk as TV's detective Columbo and, — well, you get the idea.

Wrapped and belted or flopping in the breeze, long and protective or short and zippy, the trench tops all this spring.

but there were others who wore them — Eisenhower, John Fuster
