Hills worker 'Young Engineer of the Year'

Laurel Kendall earns plaudits

The Oakland Chapter, Michigan Society of Professional Engineers, has selected Laurel Kendall, P.E., of NTH Consultants, Ltd. Farmington Hills, as "Young Engineer of the Year 1990."

The Plymouth resident has been employed by NTH Consultants, Ltd. since 1984. She has worked in capacities of steadily increasing responsibility. Her current position is project manager.

At NTH, Kendall has worked with both geotechnical and geoenvironmental projects. Her responsibilities lie with the geoenvironmental department where the majority of her work involves planning and control of project budgets and scopes.

She serves an administrative function as chief scheduler of her department and she performs some marketing tasks.

Some of the projects with which Kendall has been involved or responsible at NTH have included: an expansion to a sanitary landfill; site assessments for property transfers; preparation of plans and specification for site remediations; investigations for and design of underground structures; and evaluations of shallow and deep foundation systems, mass stability and dynamic foundation design.

Kendall's major professional accomplishment has been management of the completion of plans and specifications for the on-site closure of a large hazardous waste disposal area in southeastern Michigan. Cost estimates for the project range from $45 million to $50 million.

The closure documents have been submitted to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources for review and approval.

The project has involved coordination of engineering work from all three of NTH's offices as well as communication with personnel from the Department of Natural Resources, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Detroit Edison Co. When completed, the project will be one of the largest on-site closures of hazardous waste in the country.

Before her employment with NTH, Kendall was employed by Bechtel Corp. for five years. She began her work at Bechtel as a student engineer in 1979, and continued working on a part-time basis until her graduation from the University of Michigan. Following graduation, Kendall began working full time for Bechtel, first in their Ann Arbor office, and then in their Maryland office. During this time her job consisted primarily of performing field investigations, construction support activities and assisting in report preparation for various aspects of power plant construction.

Following completion of her master's degree (also from UM), Kendall was relocated to Midland where she worked as a Resident Geotechnical Engineer at the Midland Nuclear Power Plant for Bechtel.

In this position, her responsibilities included construction supervision of the geotechnical aspects of underpinning operations at the plant. Although it was never completed, the Midland plant was the only nuclear facility where underpinning operations were ever attempted. Kendall was appointed to a supervisory position during this assignment, supervising eight engineers.

Kendall has also served as a part-time instructor at Lawrence Technological University (formerly Lawrence Institute of Technology) for the past four years, teaching Soil Mechanics in the Construction Technology Program.
