Students help salute school's anniversary

Bands played, cheerleaders cheered and Larkshire Elementary students let go of helium-filled balloons for the end-of-the-school-year celebration. Actually, it was a school's-out celebration as well as the last of the yearlong festivities that marked the Farmington Public Schools elementary's 25th anniversary. Above right, Jennifer Hoomke, Carri Lathers and Chris-

Alonzo are three members of Farmington High School's Flag Corps who came to add to the festivities. Above left, second graders in Barbara Kahl's Larkshire class show how they felt about the boogie-woogie number played by Farmington High School's band, directed by senior drum major Don Ensing.

On stage

Four of the multi-talented young people who make up The Marquis Theatre Children are Janet Patton (top left), a third grader and a Livonia resident. On her right is Miasi Surma, a freshman at Farmington High, where she is a cheerleader and on the gymnastics team. Angela Austin, a Farmington Hills resident in the second row, has been modeling since she was 2 years old and has studied dance for seven of her nine years. Stephanie Ungor, in front, is a fourth grader at Longacre Elementary School in Farmington. The company performs this weekend in a Broadway musical revue at 7:30 p.m. Friday and at 11:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday in Northville's historic Marquis Theatre. Tickets are $5. For information, call the theater: 349-8110.
