

Local mission agency breaks ground for office

SEND International, a Farmington-based mission agency, broke ground May 20 for a new international office building at 36210 Freedom Road.

Currently, the international office of SEND shares space with the U.S. office on the Freedom Road property. Missionary Internship, an educational facility for cross-cultural training, is also located on the 26-acre property.

The new international office will be located beside the existing U.S.

office. Attention has been given to keep the wooded acreage largely intact and to design buildings which fit the residential nature of the area.

SEND International has 400 missionaries working in Asia, Europe, and North America. When the present building was built in 1974, there were about 200 SEND missionaries.

The U.S. office handles finances, recruitment and benefits for SEND missionaries from the United States. The international office services the increasing number of non-U.S. members of SEND working in foreign countries.

SEND International was begun after World War II primarily by service men and women who had worked in Asia and were concerned for the people of Japan and the Philippines.

Initially, SEND missionaries began educational institutions, but today the primary focus of the mission is to start churches where none exist and to assist the local church where it does exist.
