Senate hopeful believes in political process that my role in life has been to make the world better through the political process.

"It's a gut feeling. It's part of me."

SHE'S RUNNING a tough campaign this fall, backed by hig GOP political dollars, in an attempt to oust veteran Sen. Jack Faxon, a Democrat from Farmington Hills. Using a full-time campaign manager, she expects to spend upward of $160,000 in her effort to win the district. State Republicans have target-cft her race; they would like to win the traditionally Democratic district because of several borderline Senate raises outstate this year.

Alexander, Faxon and Huntington

lexander, Faxon and Huntington ds Libertarian Steve Silver face off in the Nov, 6 General Election.

As a moderate on social Issues, but a conservative on economics, Alexander feels she can appeal to main-stream voters. "I'm well-balanced on the issues," she said. "Most people think that way.
"If you ask someone what they expect from government, it's that they can live comfortably in their house, and that their kids get a good education."

A Birmingham-based attorney who focuses on family law, Alexander shares her life with a husband and stepson, who lives with them part of the time.

When she's not busy campaigning or handling a crisis with a client, she is proud to show off their 1950s ranch house, located in a quiet neighborhood just northeast of the 12

Mile-Telegraph area. The kitchen has been remodeled to accommodate her gourmet cooking hobby, the redecorated living room reflects a more modern flavor and Alexander relishes a natural view in the back yard, which offers plenty of room for their Great Pyrences dog, Max.

SHE HAS focused in this cam-paign on education finance issues — which affect most of the schools in the district — and also on tax reform and spending cuts, which she said need immediate attention.

said need immediate attention.
Since the August primary, when she beat out three other contenders, she has "honed and refined" her ideas, she said.
She wants school categorical aid, recently cut from area out-of-formula districts, reinstated. She wants property tax assessments rolled back from 50 percent of a four-year plan. And she wants to review the budget process to cut falt from state programs. She remains strongly pro-choice on the abortion issue, as she has throughout her life. 'I still get asked the state of the state constituents, she said she has "agreed to disagree" and believes the issue will influence some votes this November. Alexander plans to maintain her home in the district and commute, and maintain containtain with constituents through personal and public meetings.

District 15 includes the cities of Farmington, Farmington Hills, and the 15th District state Sendant Proposed Propose

Local activists oppose book-banning movement

Continued from Page 1

"Steinbeck is known to have an antibusiness attitude," and Webster's brought a challenge in Pittsgrove Township, New Jersey because of an objectionable definition of sexual intercourse.

OTHER CHALLENGED books have included Margaret Mitchell's "Goone With the Wind," Sylvia thing willy-nilly — we do have a se-lection policy."

Librarians here and across the country follow the American Li-brary Association's "Library Bill of Rights," which contends that "mate-rials should not be proscribed or re-moved because of the risk and of cert-nal disapproval" and "should not be excluded because of the origin, back-ground, or views of those contribut-ing to their creation."

_TU hosts architecture series

Lawrence Technological University has announced its 1990-91 Architecture program, the cellege's cholog professional lecture series. The schedule has follows:

• Thursday, Oct. 11: "Geological architecture" by architect Stanley Saltowitz, 7:30 p.m. at auditorium of LTU College of Architecture and Design.

• Thursday, Nov. 1: "Walls, Windows and other Weaknesses" by architect Lars Lerup, 7:30 p.m. at architect Frank Letter (Salter) from 100 feb. 95 p.m. 12; "Arstagiga from 100 feb. 95 p.m. 12; "Arstagiga auditorium.

• Thursday, Mar. 7: ""Terra Nova" by architecture/design college auditorium.

• Thursday, Mar. 7: "Terra Nova" by architecture/design college auditorium.

• Thursday, Mar. 7: "Terra Nova" by architecture/design college auditorium.

• Thursday, Mar. 7: "Terra Nova" by architecture/design college auditorium.

sculptor/artist Charles Biederson, 8 p.m. at the Detroit Institute of Art auditorium. It is a special presenta-tion co-sponsored by the DIA. Tickets are required.

• Thursday, April 11: "The Fu-ture of the Skyscraper — Does It Have One?" by structural engineer william LeMessurier, 7:30 p.m. at the architecture/design college audi-

Thursday, April 25: "My Hand is Responsible" by architect Tod Williams, 7:30 p.m. at the architec-ture/design college auditorium.

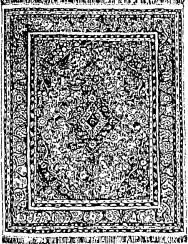

20292 Middlebelt, Livonia • South of 8 Mile

MON., THURS., FRI, 9:30-9:00 474-6900

SAVE 30 - 40% GRAND OPENING SALE designative and at the unique and an experience and an experience and ligosam's Oriental Dig Corpusy prossily announces the GDAND OPENING of all birmagina abserves dermighte fletro-ferror area for trenty years higosom saxis bringst-factorized and state location of land view or intentilingst-keep trong Chip the finest quality imports have been elabored to help celebrate this event and all are available at somings of 50 to 40% of Cope experience the selection, service and roungs at the higosom location nearest you.

ORIENTAL RUG CO.

Birmingham 808 South Woodward Phone (313) 644-7750

West Dearborn 21919 Michigan Avenue Dhone (313) 277-1330 with Teat of Batt Program Batt 14 A DOOME to 6000 pm Bats 10000 m to 6000 pm