

I am writing in response to your offer in the Birmingham Eccentric paper to have my handwriting analyzed.

I am 62 years old, male and retired last year after 40 years in the business world. I am left-handed in all that I do except writing. When I started first grade the theory then was to change left-handed children to teach them to write right-handed.

I would appreciate your analysis of my letter and will look forward to seeing your response. Thank you.

Handwriting predicts rewarding retirement

Dear Ms. Green,
I am writing in response to your offer in the Birmingham Eccentric paper to have my handwriting analyzed.

There is a directness to the manner in which you approach life and living. You seem to have an innate ability to see and act on the essential without wasting time or conversation on the extraneous. In all things, you expect perfection from yourself. You handle your work with precision and accuracy. Strong determination and the energy for high achievement are also here.

A resourceful, organized mind is much in evidence in your handwriting. You are able to find viable solutions to old problems often.

Woven throughout this handwriting is sensitivity to criticism, especially in the areas of appearance and conduct. Seemingly, you have known criticism in the past and it has caused you to be overly concerned with disapproval from other people.

Is it possible you are expecting it even when none is intended?

By nature, you are somewhat reserved, so people around you may not be aware of the empathy you feel until they get to know you better. And your dislike of small talk and direct manner may cause friendships to develop more slowly. Once a friendship is made, it is a deep and lasting one.

There appears to be strong interest in material considerations in this handwriting.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Full signature, age and handedness are all helpful. And constructive feedback is always welcome. Lorene Green regrets that time does not allow her to mail personal responses.

Dear W.C.,
Thank you for sharing your interesting handwriting with me. The wide margin on the left side of your letter tells me you have experienced a major change in your life. Your recent retirement from the world of business is probably the explanation here. And I hope you are enjoying retirement.

With the cultural exposure you have had, I'm quite sure you will find many interests and activities for a rewarding retirement.

There is about you an aura of poise and confidence. And although you are somewhat emotional by nature, you keep these feelings controlled.

Impulsive decisions are uncommon for you. Before becoming involved you first consider how the situation is going to impact on you personally. Then the decision is made with finality.

Attending preschool

Youngsters who attend Nardin Park Community Nursery School spent a night of showing off their crafts, classrooms, favorite toys and playmates to their fathers. The annual event for 3- and 4-year-olds is either a science- or art-based activity designed to involve the students' special people with their curriculum. Other programs during the year draw parents into their child's developmental experience during field trips, snack days, holiday programs and family picnics. One Nation Under God Month observed

The Exchange Club of Farmington will join with hundreds of Exchange Clubs across the nation in observing "One Nation Under God Month" this November.

Ron Holland, president of the local Exchange Club said that club-sponsored activities help spark greater community awareness of America's religious heritage as well as heighten appreciation of the many freedoms enjoyed as a nation.

"During this season of thanksgiving, all Americans should be aware of the importance of religious faith in our nation's history, and just as importantly, they should appreciate the freedom which allows us to express that faith," said Holland.

"Our local Exchange Club, along with hundreds of others across America reminds all citizens that we have always been and must always remain a religious nation."

One Nation Under God Month is a national program of the Exchange Clubs of America. The main objective of the program is to help make America's citizens more aware and appreciative of the importance of religious faith and freedom in the nation's past, present, and future.

The program is one of many sponsored nationally by Exchange, America's oldest and largest exclusively American service club organization. In addition to "One Nation Under God Month," the National Exchange Club sponsors National Crime Prevention Week, the Youth of the Year program, Freedom Shrine displays of historic American documents, and a nationwide child abuse prevention project.

The Farmington Exchange Club annually distributes 1,700 American Flags along the Memorial Day Parade route in May in its GIVEAWAY DAFLAGTOWAY project.

The local club is composed of men and women, white and blue collar workers in the Farmington/Farmington Hills community and meets Wednesday afternoons in Sweden House Cafeteria from September through June.

Persons interested in learning more about the Farmington Exchange Club are invited to call membership chairman, Rob Hackman at 855-2100.
