

New OCC chancellor vows to listen, learn

By Pat Murphy
staff writer

Patsy J. Fulton, the new chancellor of Oakland Community College, promises to "Come in listening."

"I want to hear your dreams and your vision of what this college should be," Fulton told a standing-room-only audience Friday at the school's Orchard Ridge Campus. She doesn't assume her full duties until Friday. But she said she enjoyed talking to her new colleagues — their first since Fulton was named chancellor in December — clearly because of the challenges ahead.

"I'm a risk-taker," Fulton said. "I'm willing to take calculated risks" to further the main objectives: serving students and the community.

FULTON, who resigned as president of Brookhaven College in the Dallas area to become OCC chancellor, said the weeks ahead will be dedicated to talking with staff, faculty and community leaders.

"I will learn by listening," she said. "I will respond honestly and lead with high expectations." Fulton said she accepted the OCC job because of the school's high reputation to quality education and serving students.

But an uncertain future — including the current recession — will present new challenges. "We'll have to fulfill our mission with fewer resources," she said, keep the quality high with fewer dollars.

OTHER CHALLENGES include a diversifying society that demands more highly trained workers. "We want to develop a vision of our future," she said. "And then develop that vision."

Patsy Fulton gets warm reception at first meeting as OCC chancellor.

Fulton said that as she was giving her first formal address as OCC chancellor, movers were packing her belongings and preparing to move them into an apartment in West Bloomfield Township. She expects to be fully operational in the new job by March 1.

Fulton will be OCC's first woman chancellor. The only other chief executive officer to hold that title is the person Fulton replaces, R. Stephen Nicholson.

Prior to Nicholson, the school's chief executive was called the president. The name was changed in 1985 to reflect OCC's growth and diversity. Since it started in 1962, OCC has expanded to include five campuses, with nearly 28,000 students.

Nicholson resigned from the 114,000-year post in May to become the chancellor of Higher Education Technology of the United Arab Emirates in the Persian Gulf.

OCC's first woman chancellor is transplanted Texan.
