drums and vocals. The two Lawsons are cousins. All four of the guys knew each other from Wayne Memoral High School.

The band's lineup is the result of several years of shifting membership and various combinations. Darrin Lawson was once their drummer in an earlier version of the band. He went into the military for awhile and came back as a drummer.

WHILE DARRIN Lawson was gone, the band had solidified into a tree-piece. That having suited the hard just fine but some claim owners had a problem with it. "Some har owners didn't think we could produre a full enough sound with only three people," said. Hay Lawson. "They said it didn't look good on stage."

But, pressure from har owners was not the reason the band added an extra place.

was not the reason the band added an extra player. "Having a three-piece held us-back musically," Lawson said. "It helped us creatively and with song writing to add Darrin. Our live show has improved, we have a fuller sound and Pat is freed up to play more intricate guitar parts."

Babes in Toyland vent some anger

among other things.
In one song off the LP. "Pain in gray Heart," gustarist and vocalist Kat Bjelland repeatedly screamed for blue boyfriend to expletive ingly "fry."
