Thinking green

In honor of Earth Day (April 22) and Arbor Day (April 25), Farmington Hills Mayor Aldo Vagnozzi (left), Marie Donigan of the Farmington Hills planning and community development department, and Steve Brock, assistant to the city manager, help plant a three-inch caliper locust at 27850 Orchard Lake Road. The planting kicks off a program to replace dead trees along the thoroughfare. The city's planning office has targeted 18 locations around the city where landscaping will be improved over the next two years. Improvements will be made at M-102/Halsted Road, Nine Mile/Middlebelt, 12 Mile between Farmington and Drake roads, and the I-896/Orchard Lake Road interchange and entrance into the city.

There's always "Good News" in Southfield, Michigan, when Brother Francis answers the phone.

"What time are the morning Masses? I'm hoping I can come to Eucharist before going to the office." "We're desperate! They're going to turn our electricity off. Can you help us?" "Is this where I register for the Franciscan School of Evangelization's healing workshop?" "Is a priest available? I'd like to celebrate the sacrament of Reconciliation."
For over ten years, Brother Francis Williams has cheerfully answered the phone at Duns Scotus Friary. Might this be you "calling?"
