

On-location shoots help boost students' skills

MetroVision Production Department welcomes summer interns Davonna Lividol of Specs Howard School of Broadcasting and Lauren Bird of University of Michigan. Each is at MetroVision to gather hands-on experience. Joan Lillie, production specialist, is their supervisor.

Their first projects will include public service announcements and a 30-minute program of their creation. To practice their technical skills, Davonna and Lauren have gone out on remote shoots. When "on location," the unexpected always happens. Learning to think on one's feet builds strength in resourcefulness. Trouble-shooting becomes a way of life for the "videographer."

The standard internship is three months in length and 20 hours a week. Students home on summer break who are in television at universities feel free to call either of our studios to enrich your summer. SWOCC Studio 473-7265 or MetroVision Studio 553-7303.
