Futurmill Licenses Jap Firm

Futurmill Division of Kyor Industrial Corp. has granted a license to a Japanese firm which will manufacture Futurmill's indexable milling cutters for the Asian market.

Futurmill, located at Halsted and 1-96 in Farmington, signed the agreement with Dijet Industrial Co., Ltd., of Osaka, a leading Japanese manufacturer of cemented carbides for cutting tools, dies and other tools.

Ralph Lackey, Futurmill's vice president for cutting tools, spent two weeks in Japan with Dijet personnel and potential customers.

RETIRES MEET -- Two former school superintendents met Sunday during dedication ceremonies for Harrison High School, Farmington School District's third high school which opened for classes last fall. The school was named after Gerald Harrison (left), retired Farmington superintendent and now executive director of the Farmington Chamber of Commerce. Harrison renews old times with Louis Schmidt, former superintendent of the Clarenceville School District. (Evert photo)

Stephen Yochum, graduate of Our Lady of Sorrows, and David VanLoon, graduate of Farmington Senior High, have been named to the dean's list at Lawrence Institute of Technology. Yochum is studying industrial management and VanLoon building construction technology.

New Kiln At 'Ridge'

A new 70 cubic foot, walk-in type kiln was recently fired at Oakland Ridge College's Orchard Ridge campus in Farmington. Last summer Robert Piepenburg, art instructor, and two former students began construction of the kiln used for high temperature stone-ware pottery.

The kiln, named "Sundog," according to Piepenburg, almost earned the name "Firefly" because of its habit of going out when it was first fired.

The "do-it-yourself" project made it possible to construct a kiln of a size not available commercially at a cost of $3,000, which is $2,000 less than the 40 cubic foot kiln now at the Auburn Hills campus.

The kiln is fired about twice a week to handle the half ton of clay used by Orchard Ridge's 100 art students.

'Ridge' Prof Gets Elected

Mrs. Carol Stencel, associate professor and chairman of the business education department at the Orchard Ridge Campus of Oakland Community College, was recently elected secretary to the Michigan Business Education Association executive board.

Mrs. Stencel, who has her BA from the University of Detroit and her master's from the University of Minnesota, is working on a doctorate at Michigan State University.
