Who Was Swedenborg?

Emmanuel Swedenborg, the son of a bishop, was the great Swedish scientist, philosopher and theologian, whose vast range caused Emerson to term him the madman of scholars. Dr. Parkes Godman recently named him the Universal Genius. Officially connected by appointment of the King, with the great mining industry of Sweden, he mastered all the sciences of his time, and wrote the most useful books on metallurgy, minerals, geology, astronomy, and the human brain. His life search was for the human soul. How his spiritual series were opened, after he was 50 years of age, that he might reveal the human soul, the life after death, and the Bible itself, may be read in the above named, uplifting, useful books.

Heat in Sea Water

May Drive Turbines

German science proposes to utilize heat latent in sea water, the American Chemical society has announced. A cablegram to the society stated it was possible to obtain electric current produced by harnessing such energy, says the New York World.

The message explained that the surface temperature of sea water in the tropics and in portions of the temperate zone amounts to at least 25 degrees and that it remains perpetually below 10 degrees at 200, or, at most, 400 meters depth.

To utilize this limited temperature gradient there is the possibility of evaporating carbon dioxide for ammonia with the warm water, employing the pressure thus obtained in steam turbines.

The drawback is the remoteness of the power sources from industrial centers.

New Idea About Apes

The Batangi, a race of natives who live in the Belgian Congo and who hunt the chimpanzee for food, believe that apes descended from men, according to Rev. R. H. Graham, a Baptist missionary who spent nearly forty years in that region. A Batangi chief explained their view to the missionary in the following words: "In many ages past the ape's ancestors were men. They got into debt, and made many enemies. So they ran away to the forest and refused to speak. Ever since they have remained degenerate men. We are better and prouder than the apes. Therefore, we eat them."—Pathfinder Magazine.

CONVICTS GET LIFT UPWARD

STATE POLICE ASSIST PAROLED MEN TO GO STRAIGHT ON RELEASE.

A part of the work of the State Police of which very little is known by the public is that of looking after paroled prisoners after they have served their minimum sentences in any of the prisons. The intention is to give them such supervision as will lead to reformation where possible but also to safeguard the community against further lapses into crime. This work of supervision is in the charge of State Police in the industrial communities and where there are posts of troops.

Required to Report

In Washtenaw county there are some 500 men under this supervision under charge of Lieut. Wm. Boettcher. Each paroled man is required to report at once upon release and he is aided in securing a job. He is warned that he must remain sober and must not frequent poolrooms or drinking places or associate with bad company. Any lapse upon his part is cause for his return to prison.

It is found that from 15 to 20 per cent of paroled prisoners have to be returned, the remainder going straight at least during the parole period.

Under the present system, every paroled man has some money upon release which he has earned while a prisoner. There are only a few who lack sufficient funds to carry them through until they can get something. A special arrangement has been made with the employment manager of one Detroit factory whereby such men are given work in his plant and their room and board paid for until their first pay day.

Chance to Reform

Only the employment manager of the factory knows that the man employed is a paroled convict. This assists in keeping the men at work. The State Police do not go to the factories to check up but visit the men's homes and also get reports from the factory manager. In this way lapses are quickly detected.

In checking up on the paroled men, the officers visit the county jail, attend the "showups" of prisoners at police headquarters, attend court hearings and also the domestic relations court. It is very difficult for a former convict to go wrong again without being detected at once and returned. The State Police also work with county probation officers who are under authority of the courts.

Pictures and fingerprints are made and kept by the parole division so that if a man violates the rules and leaves the state, a circular is printed and sent out at once and he is almost certain to be recaptured and sent back to serve out his sentence.

In very few cases have the State Police found that local police officers followed up former convicts and interfered with their getting and keeping employment and going straight. In such case the parole officer acts as the paroled man's friend.

Recently, in the upper peninsula, State Police have been requested to act as probation officers in circuit court cases in certain instances.

NEW BARRACKS FOR TROOPERS

Upper peninsula troopers of the Michigan State Police will have better quarters in the future. Ground has been broken for a new barracks at Marquette, near the prison, which will supplant the old barracks at Negaunee. In case of trouble in the prison, as has happened before, the troopers will be close at hand. A two-story stucco building is being erected with garage. Capt. Arch. N. Downing will have his headquarters there.

Citizens of Newberry donated the materials for a small post building there and the troopers did most of the work of putting it up. Formerly the men stationed there lived in rented rooms.

A new post has also been established near Iron Mountain.

Cleghorn Gets Badge

As testimony of their regard for his ability and handling of duties as acting police chief for several weeks, the city council of Hamtramck recently presented Lieut. John C. Cleghorn, commander of the St. Clair detachment of the Michigan State Police, with a gold and platinum badge, inscribed "Commissioner of Public Safety." On the back of the badge is an inscription showing the appreciation of the city of Hamtramck for his services from March 3 to April 25. Lieut. Cleghorn was in complete charge at that time of the police department of the city, having been commissioned by the governor to take charge when local officials were unable to preserve order, following a shooting spree within the ranks of the city department and apparent complete demoralization of its control.

A Mason county bovine was caught devouring a raincoat. Which goes to show the danger of putting water in the milk.

Pilsudski would have a hard time getting by in this country with a name that sounds so much like a former brewer.

Probably the reason why the automobile dealer instead of the grocer gets the payments is, the grocer can't come and take back the groceries.
