

FAITH IN FARMINGTON

No business is so dependent upon public confidence as a bank. The very nature of its business as guardian of its customers' finances implies implicit faith on the part of those customers.

It is, therefore, imperative that those persons who direct the business of a bank measure up to this responsibility.

Our consistent growth is evidence of the confidence imposed in us by the citizens of Farmington. And this confidence brings home to us a genuine appreciation of our responsibility and duty.

The Farmington State Savings Bank pledges its services to Farmington. We have faith in its future and we shall endeavor to grow as our city grows.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

There is about as much sense in saying the state should construct and maintain and repair trunk line pavement inside cities, as there would be in saying the state must establish half of its fish hatcheries and game refuges in cities, says the Michigan State Digest.

Michigan's assets are her streams and lakes, woods and parks, industries and agricultural sections. Roads—and good roads—are needed that these resources may develop. The only way they can be secured is by the state building them. The cities have gone along for many years providing streets for the residents and visitors. They probably can continue. Their struggle has been no greater if as great, than that faced by the state in providing hundreds of miles of country roads, where the population is not dense enough to permit financing trunk line construction.

If the state is required to construct and keep up the trunk line routes in the cities, it cannot keep up any sort of an adequate building program outside the cities.

Take your choice. Improve your city trunk lines and have no roads upon which to travel when you get outside the cities, or leave your city street arrangement alone and get surfaced trunk line arteries out in the state. The saving to the average city dweller, if the state should shoulder part of the cost, would be so small he wouldn't know he saved anything. But in the aggregate the cost to the state would be so great that every motorist would feel the effect of it when he left the city for a drive. The wear and tear on his car, if he went into the country, would be more than he could benefit from state participation.

It's the Little Things That Count Around the Home

There's only a few dollars difference between the home of drudgery and the home of comfort and pleasure.

Look around your home—see what you need to make your work convenient and easy.

Dont' say, "I need this or that but can't afford to get it."

You can't afford NOT to get it. Your health is worth many, many times the cost of a few new pots and pans, or whatever it is you really need.

It won't cost much to get everything you ought to have, if you get them HERE.

We will go a long way to serve you
