TO FARMINGTON VOTERS A CORRECTION

In the March 31st issue of this paper an advertisement said to have been "paid for by friends of the Mayor without his knowledge or solicitation" was published a statement that "about 50 per cent of the taxes was used to pay the indebtedness accumulated in previous years."

The fact is less than 10 per cent of the City's established income was used for this purpose. No correction to this exaggerated statement has been printed until this time.

In the April 21st issue of this paper the Mayor's affidavit as to expenses indicates that 100 copies of this paper were bought and distributed without consideration or correction to this misstatement.

This advertisement paid for by a Citizens Committee who believe in Honest Advertising, Fair Treatment and Square Dealing.

PONTIAC SIX NOW MADE IN NEW PLANT

The recent removal of the Pontiac Six production machinery from the Oakland factory to the new $10,200,000 Pontiac plant was a vivid illustration of the length to which efficiency has been developed in the automotive industry. Though 375 large machines had to be disconnected, hauled almost a mile to their new locations, and re-installed there, the move was accomplished without the slightest interruption of production, either of Oakland Sixes or of Pontiac Sixes.

Until the completion of the new Pontiac plant, the Pontiac Six was manufactured in the Oakland factory, where it was born little more than a year ago. Almost 100,000 Pontiac Sixes were produced in the Oakland plant. However, as a demand for the Pontiac increased, more and more space was required for the machinery to manufacture it, as well as to meet Oakland's own increasing demand.

So thoroughly did Oakland and Pontiac production machinery fill the Oakland factory that a visitor would thought it impossible to extricate a single machine without shutting down the entire plant. Scientific planning, however, enabled engineers to carry out their huge task without interfering with the production schedules of either car.

When the date for the move was set, A. A. Miller of the maintenance department carefully plotted every detail of the move in advance. He prepared charts listing every machine and stating its specifications, so that proper facilities might be provided to handle each unit. He ascertained from the foremen in various production departments that each had sufficient stock on hand to supply the assembly lines while the move was in progress. From the traffic department he obtained freight cars, a locomotive, and a clean truck from the Oakland plant siding to the covered spur within the Pontiac plant.

Loading of freight cars went on rapidly, with three crews working. The short haul to the new plant, and re-installation of the machines there, completed the job. This was comparatively simple, due to adequate space and lighting, the presence of facilities for handling the heavy equipment. Removal from the Oakland plant grew easier as it progressed, for the crews operated inward from the edges, constantly gaining space in which to work.

Two days' work proved that the crews could keep ahead of the schedule laid down for them. At the end of that time they had moved 11 carloads, totaling 440 tons, the amount of work prescribed for 90 hours instead of 48.

Included in the moving job is a re-arrangement of machinery in the Oakland plant itself. One of these units, a big milling machine, weighs 55 tons. The moving crews prefer large machines to small ones, explaining that the satisfaction of seeing a big hole compensates for the effort involved in creating that space.

Today the 375 machines uprooted from the Oakland factory are performing their accustomed operations in the new Pontiac plant and there are hundreds of new machines, necessitated by the vastly-increased Pontiac Six demand, to help them. The space they vacated will be filled with new machinery for Oakland Six production.

What Michigan needs is a few more razor strops and old-fashioned woodsheds.

Scientists say human life has existed on this planet for 250,000 years—just about the age of the first "Pat and Mike" story.

A Chicago man wanted his wife arrested because she met him on the street and took his wages. It is kinda hard for some of the girls to even wait until a fellow gets home.

With a whipping post we're going to need a anti-monkey law and a couple Salem witches.

If Seth Pulver's "smeller" law succeeds in cutting down the smell of frying onions we'll feel that it is at least worth while.
