Sunrise at Stamboul

At dawn we ascended a lofty minaret in Stamboul—so lofty that we could see the lifting sun kindle the snowy outline of the Asian Olympus while yet Stamboul crouched indistinguishably gray upon her seven hills.

Then Anatolia's plains caught the speeding fash, the Bosphorus blazed around its silhouetted battle fleet of five nations, and its ribbonlike estuary, where huddled silent ships and stacked masts, became indeed the Golden Horn.

High over sleeping Stamboul gleamed groves of slim minarets, like extinguished watch candles of the night. And last, roof by roof, the red-tiled street-rutted city shone forth in multi-colored design, as if, with the sunrise, a bazaar gate had been flung wide and some great outstretched rug had gloved into warm life.—Melville Chater, in the National Geographic Magazine.

Playgoers Insured

Every now and then somebody laughs himself to death at the movies, comments Capper's Weekly. Fatalities also have occurred as a result of other strong emotional feeling. Several Eastern picture theaters now insure their patrons, and they may laugh their heads off or cry their eyes out safely, for they are insured by a policy which reimburses the victim for any medical attention.

Unlooked-For Visit

It seems that an Eastville (Mass.) housewife had sent an emergency call to her plumber, who was supposed to be at the engine house, but the message got mixed in transit. She was a much surprised woman when the whole Oak Bluffs fire department came dashing up to her home.

AS USUAL

"Couldn't find the house of that telephone girl I had a date with."
"How's that?"
"She gave me the wrong number."

Turkey Follows Styles

Styles discarded in Europe become passe in Turkey almost simultaneously since the adoption of modern ideas in the land of Mohammed. The fashions of the continent are closely watched and new ones adopted almost as soon as they appear. When patent leather for shoes was dropped by Europe's best dressers within the past year, Turks quickly changed to other material for their footwear, and when gloves found favor in Paris they soon were seen in the large cities of Turkey. Other changes have been made as quickly.

Power From Sweet Potato

Motor fuel is to be made from sweet potatoes and molasses in a plant now under construction in Queensland, Australia, in the first large-scale attempt in the world to produce power alcohol. The plant will have a capacity of 2,000,000 gallons a year.
