A special communication of Farmington Lodge, No. 151, F. & A. M. Monday evening, May 16, 1927, for work in the first degree. James L. Hogle, Sec'y.

Royal Scion Happy in Most Humble Calling

In Vienna lives an Austrian archduke who now doubles the roles of insurance solicitor and grocery clerk for a living. He calls himself Leopold Wolfling, but once he was the Archduke Leopold Salvator, brother of the Crown Princess Louise of Saxony and a member of the same family as Archduke John, who disappeared many years ago under the name of John Orth. At the beginning of this century Leopold renounced his titles to marry a Bavarian stage beauty, whom he subsequently divorced. For a time he served as a private in the Swiss army. Later he was glad to get a job as a waiter in a public cafe. Now he is an old man, but he toils up and downstairs making his daily calls, and in his spare time helps behind the counter in a little grocery store run by his daughter and son-in-law. And he says he is much happier than when he bobnobbed with royalty.—Kausas City Star.

Columbus Not First

Although Columbus is regarded as the discoverer of the New world, in the sense that he opened it to exploration, he was not the first to reach the mainland of America and he did not know that he was in the vicinity of a new continent. He thought he had found a new route to India and the Far East; hence he called the natives Indians. The new continents were afterward named after Amerigo Vespucci, who traveled in South America and wrote an account of his explorations.—Pathfinder Magazine.
