Four Win Grants In Science

Four Livonia science students are beginning work on an eight-week summer scholarship program on grants from the Michigan Cancer Foundation. The study project will be conducted in several laboratories in the Metropolitan Detroit area for some 50 students chosen by the Foundation. Willis Blossom, of Emerson Junior High School in Livonia, will be one of the instructors involved. Livonia winners are Sandra Kay Gierman, 11148 Garden Avenue; Arthur Curtis, 15354 Huff Road; Nancy Kushigian, 35325 Elmira; Susan Siedman, 14298 Richmond. They met with other winners June 24 in the Cancer Center in Detroit for the yearly orientation program. Following the morning program the students were taken on a tour of the Michigan Cancer Foundation facilities. Other sites of interest included the orientation program at the Wayne State University school of medicine's medical library and its occupational and environmental health laboratories, and the Parke-Davis laboratories. They met with other winners June 24 in the Cancer Center in Detroit for the yearly orientation program.

Institute Will Explore White America's Ethics

"Racism and Violence: White Dilemmas," the Second Annual Institute in Ethics and Moral Theology, runs July 15, through 26 at the University of Detroit.

"The Institute," according to Father Donald Bresine, S.J., director, "seeks to understand what can be learned of the basic moral and ethical character, values, goals, principles, and problems of white America. It reflects a crisis management approach to militant reaction, as well as to black radicalism or nihilism.

"Most of the participants and speakers in the institute are white. What can be learned of these people by looking at their racism and their violence?"

"We part company with the still dominant tendency of researchers toward studying black people. This strong inclination of white researchers to study black people is based on at least two factors: First, the far greater researchability of blacks than whites, based on the blacks' inability until recently to resist being researched.

"Second, the white assumption that the problems of racism and violence exist primarily in the black people.

"We disagree. White people can be researched in their religions, literature, laws, ethics, liturgies, and other expressions. The very method of basic moral reflection renders whites every bit as researchable as blacks.

"Further, the assumption that the problem exists primarily in other people—whatever its degree of accuracy for other types of research—Bible College Enrollment 79 is totally self-frustrating as a basis for moral and ethical reflection. "One either does ethical reflection upon oneself and one's own group," Fr. Bresine concluded, "or one does it vainly and arrogantly."

SOME OF THE topics and discussion leaders include: "The Psychodynamics of Prejudice," Dr. Arthur Cryan, social psychologist; Fr. Bresine, "To Change the Climate of Violence in Detroit."

"The Polarization of a Nation," Dr. Milan C. Miskowicz, recently director of Investigations, Kerner Commission, currently director, lawyers committee for Civil Rights under Law.

Workshop in the Kerner Commission Report; Gene Fisher, theologian, workshop chairman; Rufus P. Knighton, coordinator, Downtown Churches Action Mission; Fred Charbonneau, Human Relations Commission of Warren.

"Change Through Law," Ernest Goodman, attorney, past president National Lawyers Guild; "The American Brand of Racism," Dr. Thomas P. Melady, author, president, Africa Service Institute.

"Violence in the Media," Rev. Thomas Porter, S.J., former dean Columbiere College, currently, associate professor of English, U. of D.

"The Crisis of Confidence in the Police," Burton Levy, Michigan Civil Rights Commission. "Genocidal Implications in Contemporary Ethics," Father James V. McGlynn, S.J., philosopher, "Towards a Theology of Revolution," Roland F. Smith, S.J., theologian; and "Violence in American History," Dr. Edward Lurie, historian.

Four seminars from St. Ignace are working in the inner city this summer with the Archdiocesan Opportunity Program as counselors in the day camp program and directors of Project Challenge, a program for mentally retarded children.

John Larson and Gaby Bueche are counselors working with 240 mentally retarded children in Project Challenge. The youngsters are divided into three-week programs with 80 children in each.

Held at Sacred Heart Seminary, "Project Challenge is an attempt to offer parents a break in the continuous responsibility of caring for mentally retarded children."

Jerry Hafetz, the third seminarian, is director of Project Scope. Working with him as one of five center directors is Homer McMaherty, also from St. Johns.

A total of 2,100 inner city youths, seven to 12 years old will participate in these day camps, operating at five sites throughout the city. Employment opportunities for young people in the inner city from 14 to 22 years are also available in this project.

THIS SUMMER opportunity program, financed by the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Archdiocese, also includes Summer Headstart and Summer Neighborhood Youth Corps.

Summer Headstart is an enrichment program for 1,000 children from four to five years old who will enter kindergarten in the fall. In the 28 centers, the children will have a snack

Orthodox Churches Set Festival

The Eastern Orthodox Churches of Greater Detroit will hold their 11th annual Eastern Orthodox Festival, Sunday, July 21, at the Michigan State Fair Grounds.

James S. J. Theologian, general chairman for the 1968 all-day affair, said a minimum of 10,000 people from 25 churches are expected to be on hand for the festivities.

Traditionally, the annual festival features international foods, music, dancing and customs of the various nationality groups which participate in Orthodoxy. Among those represented will be Albanian, Greek, Bulgarian, Ukrainian, Macedonian, Russian, Romanian, Serbian and Syrian.

Activities will begin at noon. Fair-goers will be able to choose the many exotic national foods and dishes, which include a wide range of pastries. Singing groups and roving musicians will help add the continental touch. For children, there will be rides and games.

The combined group of Orthodox parishioners will celebrate a Vesper Service at 5 p.m. at the fair grounds band shelter, with robed choirs singing the responses.

Various dance groups and acts, complete with colorful native costumes, will be featured in an "International Show." Later there will be American ballroom dancing for everyone.

The festival is open to the public. Admission is one dollar for adults—a donation to the Wayne State University Religious Fund. Admission for juniors, age 10-18, is 50 cents; children under 10 are admitted free.
