Activity Centers Make Most Of Living Space

Want to make the most of every inch of living space? Then plan according to "activity centers" rather than merely furnish rooms in the traditional sense.

As a starting point, take a close look at the master bedroom to explore its possibilities as a combination bed-sitting room or office.

By rearranging furniture to make room for a desk or table and two comfortable chairs, chances are you can enjoy the quiet retreat you've long wanted.

"This kind of creative space planning can be fun and rewarding, once you've learned to break some of the conventional furniture arrangement rules," advises Mary Ann Willis, interior design consultant for the Galway division of Burwood Products Company, Traverse City, Mich.

"In the bedroom, for example, try bringing your bed away from the wall and centering it in the area you've selected as your sleeping quarters," she suggested. "Backstop the headboard and nightstands with a floor-to-ceiling divider that adds both decorative interest and a sense of privacy."

WHILE new home statistics show that master bedrooms have been getting larger in recent years, those planned for children seem to have been shrinking in size. Often they're barely adequate for sleeping and dressing, which means the child will need a spot elsewhere for study, hobbies, and play. Consider setting off a section of the family room for this purpose, Miss Willis suggested. Allow enough space for some storage shelves, be sure to provide a good light, and screen the area with a divider to encourage concentration as well as to keep clutter out of sight.

"First developed to help organize space in open plan homes and apartments, room dividers are as decorative as they are functional," Miss Willis pointed out. They are composed of

Lawnseed Production Sophisticated

Lawnseed production is becoming ever more sophisticated. New cultivars are now certified for genetic identity, assuring that the purchaser will receive seed solely of the variety or varieties represented.

Seed is carefully grown as an agricultural crop. It is harvested from fields that are kept essentially free from weeds and off-type vegetation.

After harvest the seed is cleaned by a series of screenings, blowings, and other separations, that remove seeds or debris of dissimilar size, shape or weight. Seed completely free of weeds and crop can be specified for special usage (as on fumigated soil), where the added cost that this super-careful handling entails is justified.

Normal standards, already high, are sufficient for most plantings, however, considering the wealth of dormant weed seed present in typical lawn soils. In all cases the seeds, covering a labeling require that weed and crop content, if any, be listed; and most of the "weeds" recognized by law are a nuisance in the farmer's field rather than in a mowed lawn.

Painted Daisies Bloom 'Til Fall

Painted daisies are members of the chrysanthemum clan, distinguished from other chrysanthemums by the long, slender stems coming out of the basal group of very finely cut, attractive leaves.

Flowers of painted daisies are usually white, shades of pink, rose or red, sometimes lilac or yellow and may be single, semi-double or fully double.

Grow these plants from seeds and buy mixed colors as such a mixture will give you the widest selection. Buying seeds of a double-flowered strain also will give a wide selection as at least a few of the resulting plants will have single flowers.

PAINTED daisies begin to bloom in June. If faded flowers are kept picked, the plants will continue to produce blossoms until early autumn.

Plant the seeds in a special place where you can care for the seedlings. Sow the seeds thinly and transplant any seedlings that are crowded as soon as they are two or three inches tall.

Leaves only will grow the first year. The next year you'll have flowers and they will continue to come each year, for painted daisies are perennials.

Where To Put Air Cleaner

Best place to locate an electronic air cleaner is anywhere where family "living" is concentrated.

However, if someone in the family suffers from an allergy, a location in the bedroom wing of the home is suggested by home comfort experts. If that person has a severe allergy, place the air cleaner in his or her bedroom.

If the bedroom windows are tightly closed, leave the door open for effective circulation.

You can leave the blossoms in the garden to add to the outdoor picture or you can cut them for indoor use. They last well in water.

Plants are also free from all insect pests.

THESE PAINTED daisies are a strain called Robinson's Giant Hybrids -- biggest, best.
