AN OPERATOR AND DOG SHARE IN LIFE-SAVING

An alert telephone operator at Attleboro, Mass., is sharing with a mongrel dog the distinction of having saved the lives of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Matthews of that place. The operator, Miss Maud Williams, was attracted by a signal on the line and when she failed to get a response she detected a peculiar noise which led her to believe that the house might be on fire. She communicated with the fire department who arrived on the scene just about the time the mongrel dog succeeded in pulling the bed clothes of the bed occupied by Mrs. Matthews who thus awoke to find the house filled with smoke.
