FIRST IN MICHIGAN

Truman Eggleston, Spring Arbor, Mich., first farmer in Michigan to receive an extra labor for the government for cleaning his corn fields and premises to meet the 1927 corn borer control regulations. Mr. Eggleston, owner of a 220-acre Jackson County farm he calls "Hardscrabble," had 29 acres of cornland to clean up this spring. He plowed and handpicked it to more than earn the $2 an acre allowed.

RADIO TELEPHONE AIDS SALE OF NEW CHINE

A new American-made product was recently introduced in England via the transatlantic radio telephone.

A company in Michigan that manufactures automobile horns and radios has perfected a new chime which is so distinctly different in sound and cadence from previous products that it was important that the company's London representative should know exactly what it was like. A letter could not properly describe it and the shipment of a sample would have taken too much time. Accordingly, in this emergency the sales manager called up the representative in London, and the rich harmonious tones of the chime were passed into the telephone receiver and were heard in the London office 4,000 miles away, with the result that the London representative at once had a clear idea of just what the new horn was like and was able to start his campaign for its sale in England.

Rhode Island has approximately the same number of telephones as the combined cities of Bremen, Birmingham, Dublin, Marseilles, and Rome, although it has only about one-fifth of the combined population of these five European cities.

GRAIN FED WITH PASTURE ADDS TO MILK YIELD

If you are one of the dairymen who believe that a radical change in diet for 30 days doesn't make much difference to a dairy cow, just try it on the human system for a while. Cut out meat and potatoes and other substantial items from your menu for a month, then take stock of your physical condition. Yet that is literally what you are doing to a dairy cow when you turn her out to pasture and deprive her of the grain ration she has had through the winter and spring. Such a feeding schedule means the elimination of solid, body-building feed, and the substitution of something that won't accomplish the same result.

Of course, cows like green, succulent grass, just as children like lots of things to eat that you wouldn't think of permitting them to live on. The cow won't complain, but sooner or later she will show in the milk pail the bad effects of the substitution.

Even at its best grass isn't sufficient. It has a tonic effect, and may stimulate milk flow for a while, but after she has been on pasture alone for some time, the cow begins to take off her back what she puts in the pail.

Dairy authorities who have experimented extensively in this direction urge dairymen this year to try keeping their cows on a grain ration with the grass. This gives both cow and pasture a chance.

What is more important, as extensive tests have proved, cows so fed will start the fall in far better condition than would otherwise be possible, and will give a bigger yield straight through the entire year.

Seek Exact Data on

Forest Fire Fighting

The government, state of New York, University of Syracuse, Lumber Products association are acting jointly in some observations being made in the Adirondack mountains with the hope of arriving at some data which will be of great value in the matter of fighting forest fires. It is expected that in a great measure it will be possible to anticipate forest fires and to make preparations to fight them in advance. The observations have to do with the humidity conditions and inflammability in different types of forests. Such data will make it possible to prepare in advance for a particularly dry season and to concentrate forces at the right time. It will also allow the fire-fighting organization to relax during seasons of little or no danger. Definite knowledge about humidity and inflammability of all types of forests will indicate when to expect fire in virgin stands, soft and hard woods, in cut-over regions and in plantations.

Slightly Mixed

Aunt Jane is a devout member of a southern Indiana Methodist congregation. Thanksgiving day she attended morning services at the church and the following Sunday her neighbors were amazed to see a washing blowing on her line long before the Sunday school bells rang.

Investigation disclosed that Aunt Jane, confused by the special service of the week, had decided to get the week's washing out of the way as the day of the week was, she believed, Wednesday. Not until the church bells began to ring would she believe that she had unintentionally broken her custom of Sunday rest and worship.—Indianapolis News.

Famous Pigeon Dead

The carrier pigeon which helped save Verdun has died of old age at Paris. The bird had a wound stripe on its leg band and was the pensioner of the republic. In 1916, through a barrage of shrapnel, the pigeon carried a message which prevented Proletier hill from being captured, maintaining communication with the front when all human means had failed, although it was hit by a shell splinter that carried away its claws. The power of instinct has seldom been so well demonstrated, says Capper's Weekly.

Resourceful Cuss

Before the last snowstorm had really a good start, a Fall River householder of an ingenious turn of mind and with no predilection toward a snow shovel, covered his broad front doorstep with old pieces of carpeting. The snow fell on them all day. When it stopped he came out and yanked off the strips of carpet and dumped the loads of snow on the lawn.—Boston Globe.

Drew Line at Saxophone

Prisoners at the Alameda county (Calif.) jail endure close confinement, jail stew and scrubbing brush duty. But to have to listen to a saxophone is too much. An inmate, charged with burglary, sought to take lessons by mail. The kangaroo court, unofficial, but absolute among prisoners, was called into extraordinary session and put a hasty quietus on his plan.

Condon Not Prolific

One egg every two or three years is the limit of the female California condor, according to George K. Shaffer in an article in Liberty. This low birth rate, Shaffer explains, is one of the biggest factors in the rapidly nearing extinction of
