House rebukes Engler try to cut science panel

A bipartisan group of lawmakers is alming to overturn Gov. John Engler's plan to reorganize the Science Advisory Council, set up under the new state "poliuters jay" law.
"The Science Advisory Board had been getting strong bipartisan support," said Rep. Jan Dolan, R-Farmington Hills.

"That's why the bill passed," said Dolan, who in 1990 was part of sev-eral days of intense negotiations that saved the bill after it was defeated once.

On Tuesday, Dolan and two outstate Republicans Joined eight Democrats in the House Conservation Committee in a resolution disapproving Engler's reorganization plan.

Four Republicans abstained. With 11-0 support, the disapproval resolu-tion goes to the House floor, perhaps as early as today.

LAWMAKERS objected that En-gler wasn't just reorganizing the sci-ence panel; he was conferring new powers - the power to consider "cost effectiveness" before ordering

"The governor can transfer pow-ers, not confer powers," legislative aide Gary Gulliver told the House

ministration."
That section gives the Legislature 60 days to disapprove the change. Unless disapproved, the executive order takes effect. Engler issued the order Nov. 8.
The resolution disapproving the Science Advisory Board was introduced by committee chair Tom Al-ley, D-West Branch, and had several Republican co-sponsors, including Rep. Shirley Johnson of Royal Oak. Among local Democratic co-spon-sors were Democrats Justine Barus of Westland, Maxine Berman of Southfield and James Kosteva of

THE CONSERVATION Committee this week was due to consider disapproving another element of Engler's Department of Natural Resources reorganization plan.
It would abolish the Water Resources Conmission, the Air Pollution Control Commission, the Haz-ardous Waste Site Review boards and the advisory board for the Clean Michigan Punes, DNR director, said the changes would centralize decision making in DNR staff and policy making in the Natural Re-sources Commission. "It will empower people in the front line to make decisions. For ex-ample, a forester has been in an area 15 years. Consumers Power waster just in a line. Now It takes 6 days (to make a decision). The forester can do it, and take care of the paper work, in a week."

REP. MARY Brown, D-Kalamazoo, objected that the boards Engler wants to abolish all give the general public a chance for input.
The resolution disapproving this change, authored by Alley, contains only Democratic sponsors. If it's passed by the House, it could run into trouble inthe GOP-controlled mate. Harmes said that in implementing reorganization, he would seek "bal-ance — protecting natural resources and providing recreation, balance in economic development and environ-mental netection."
