

Players act out Kevorkian courtroom drama

Members of the media surround Dr. Jack Kevorkian (center) and his West Bloomfield attorneys Geoffrey Fieger (left) and Michael Schwartz before the hearing.

As the judge announces he is sending the case to circuit court on two open murder counts, Dr. Jack Kevorkian (right) shows little emotion, just glancing at his attorney, Geoffrey Fieger. Later, he said he expected the decision.

Sharon Welch, who was in the Oakland County cabin at the time of the two assisted suicides, gives Kevorkian a smile of support ahead of the hearing.

Farmington Hills resident Janet Good, president of the Michigan Hemlock Society, talks with Kevorkian before the hearing.

Rochester District Judge James Sheehy says he sent the case to the higher court for a jury trial because he couldn't judge the extent of Kevorkian's involvement.
