Ideas to help make your wedding special

Consider these locally based services before wrapping up your wedding plans:

Feel like dancin'?

If your dream wedding reception means dancin' all night, check out the professional DJ's at Silver Sounds in Canton.

Nick Kulka, DJ and Silver Sounds vice president, said, "you're the boss" when it comes to selecting the music and planning the reception from beginning to end.

The company has enough DJ's to do 11 parties a day, but if you plan to tie the knot this spring or summer, think about scheduling a live audition soon. A studio audition in the company's headquarters, with enough room for the whole wedding party, is the only way to select the right DJ, said Kulka, who started his DJ career as a student at Eastern Michigan University.

Silver Sounds uses compact discs, cassettes, turntables and mixers with CD-quality sound reproduction and a four-second digital sampler with delay. Need more? For dramatic lighting, choose spotlights, neon sticks, strobes, mirror balls, bubbles, fog machines and even lasers.

Silver Sounds has entertained for the Detroit Lions, Canton Township, the Canton Chamber of Commerce, the Westland mayor, the Northville Parade Committee and Miss Remembrance of the USA.

Weddings make headlines

In The Wedding Times, the bride, groom and wedding party make front page news.

When Laurie Freedman of West Bloomfield married several months ago, she produced a four-page newsletter called The Wedding Times to announce the nuptials to friends and family. Engaged friends loved the idea and started placing orders. Before she knew it, Freedman, who runs a writing service called The Write Stuff, had a new business.

Freedman said The Wedding Times "is a fun and original way of sharing the excitement of a wedding." Each newsletter includes a lead story about how the couple met, a color or black and white photo, profiles about everyone in the wedding party, a section for personal notes from the bride and groom and a wedding invitation.

Brides use the newsletter as an invitation or enclose it with a formal invitation, said Freedman. Some brides laminate a copy for wedding guests and others use it as a remembrance for the wedding party.

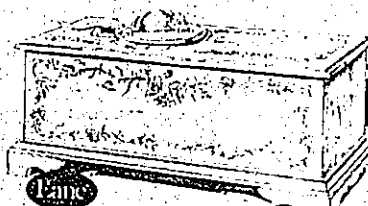

The Wedding Times comes in two sizes. Prices start at $163 for 50. For information, call 932-0222.
