'Nature Of Conflict' Will Be Discussed At MSU

How often does a group project or a family discussion end up in conflict and argument? How often does hostility keep us from reaching our goals?

Participants in Michigan State University's annual College Week for Women may choose to study the nature of conflict in a three-session short course June 15 to 18. It is one of 23 to be offered at College Week.

The event is open to all Michigan women, whether or not they are college graduates. Participants will live in an MSU dormitory and attend three mini-classes of their choice. They will also tour the campus, attend special assemblies and meet other "coeds" in a college atmosphere.

Registrations should be made with College Week for Women, 103 Human Ecology Building, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Mich. 48822.

Maxine Ferris, communication consultant for the MSU New Horizons Program, will teach the course on conflict.

"The course views conflict in groups as normal, perhaps inevitable, and often desirable," Dr. Ferris says. "Through discussion, role playing, simulation and other group experiences, it focuses on identifying the signs of unrest leading to conflict, diagnosing the causes and possibilities of unrest, planning and following a workable course of action for meeting conflict."

Other classes will include "A hidden agenda," a buildup of hostility which, even though it may no longer be important still interrupts group activities.

"Often conflicts are not resolved, according to Dr. Ferris. Instead, they must be managed. When individuals develop a sense of 'community,' they learn to respect the opinions of others, even if they don't agree."

Other classes will include "Busy Woman's Guide to Power and Influence," "What's Happening to Eating?" "The Emerging Role of The Church Woman" and "The Family - A Caring Unit."

Club Will See Orchid Greenhouse

The Rosedale Gardens Branch of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association will wind up its season with a tour through the greenhouse of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McCullough, 14800 Harrison, Livonia, to see their approximately 3,000 orchids.

Mrs. McCullough will conduct the tour at 10 a.m., Tuesday, June 8. She will also give advice on growing orchids from the large, frilly ones to the tiny green ones.

After the tour, a pedicel luncheon will be held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Jerolamon, 15520 Abundale, Livonia. Members are asked to bring a dish to pass and their own table service. Anyone interested in making the tour is asked to call the president, Mrs. Donald J. McLean, 9610 Farmington Rd., Livonia.

"There is life in the end of a finger," about the same as there is life in the embryo in the early stages of pregnancy - and if it is necessary, the finger is amputated."

Also present at the meeting was Linda Norquist, representing a group that plans to file a suit holding that abortion laws are unconstitutional because they infringe upon the woman's right to privacy and to control over her own body.

She invited all women interested in becoming a plaintiff in such a suit to write to Women's Services, C/O Wayne Women's Liberation, Box 26, Wayne State University, Detroit 48201.
