$\mathbf{Vermont}$ gets vibrant in summer

By Sally Johnson New York Times Syndicate

Summer is the reason most Ver-monters put up with the winters. For three months, after the roin ends and before the frost turns the leaves, the world becomes a vibrant, lush green and the residents, aroused from their hibernation, venture forth, remembering once aroused from their hibernation, venture forth, remembering once ogain why they live here.

The town of Middlebury on the western side of the state is an ideal jumping-off point for forays into the Green Mountains, because nothing is far away. Lake Champlain, 20 to 25 minutes to the west, offers awimning, boating and fishing. The mountains, with hiking trails, awimming holes and waterfalls, are about drive to the east.

A college town of 8,000 compolitant than its size or setting would auggest, with a variety of restaurants and ions that are often included on the recommended lists of national guidebooks.

From mid-June though August the streets and stores sound like a rural United Nations, with people chatting in languages from French to Arabic to Chinese, all of them students at Middlebury College's Summer Language Schools, where English Is the only forbidden tongue.

Summer days begin with a rosy unrise over the Green Mountains sunrise over the Green Mountains and end with a spectacular display of pink, purple and orange as the sun descends over the Adirondacks of New York state to the west. For three weeks in July the

Picturesque pedaling: Long, flat stretches of land surrounding picturesque Lake Champlain, near Middlebury, make the area a cyclist's paradis weather turns hot (by local stand-ards hot is anything phove 90 deweather turns hot thy local standards hat is anything above 90 degrees) and humid. When that happens relief is — literally — in sight: the Green Mountains, reliably 10 degrees cooler than the Champlain Valley floor, are a 20-minute drive cast and up.

And should it rain, Burlington, with its array of cultural and culi-

And should it rain, Burlington, with its array of cultural and culturary offerings, is an hour to the north.

Mozart under the lights at Lin-Mozart under the lights at Lice colo Center is an enchanting musi-cal experience. Mozart under the stars at Shelburne Farms near Burlington, is something else ngain. The Farms is the grand, turn-of-thee-century, lakefront summer home built by Dr. William Seward Webb and Lila Vanderbiit Webb.

home built by Dr. Wilham Sewart Webb and Llla Vandrebit Webb.
For three weeks each year the musiclans of the Vermont Mozart Festival play on the South Porch to the people seated on the grounds around the Shelburne House. Although other festival venues include downtown Burlington and the Lake Champlain ferry, this is a perennial favorite.

The Vermont Equestrian Summer Showcase, which began with two weeks in Killington, ends with two weeks in Killington, ends with two weeks at the Tropp Family Lodge in Stowe Aug. 12 to 23. Spectator fees are $5 ($7 on Sundays) and $2 for children under 12 and seniors ($3 on Sundays). Call ($92) 496-7469 for schedules.
One of the more unusual summer

One of the more unusual summer treats Middlebury has to offer is the Overview: The view from a rocky ledge of the Green Mountain National Forest overlooks Branbury State Park and Lake Dummore, both in the town of Salisbury, Vt., just south of Middlebury.

Bread Loaf Writers' Conference, where each night from Aug. 11 to 23 well-known authors give readings. Authors range from Jay Parini and Ron Powers to Hilma Wolitzer and Linda Pastan.

The readings at 8:15 in the Little Theater at the Bread Luaf college campus above Ripton are free. For information call (802) 388-3711, ext.

Outings

When Joseph Battell, the wealthy but eccentric Middlebury resident who built the Bread Loaf Inn around the turn of the century, was alive he banned all automobiles from the road leading to his mountain retreat. If that seems extreme in these times it is still an idea that has merit. Hiking and cycling are better choices.

nas ment. rixing and cycing are better choices.

The day-hiking possibilities around the Middlehury region range from a casual, if slightly uphill, stroll to a rugged, rock-climbing experience, best left to the initiated.

Two valuable sources of informa-tion are the "Day Hiker's Guide to Vermont," which covers hikes off the Long Trail, and the "Guide Book of the Long Trail." Both are published by the Green Mountain Club and both are sold in the Ver-ton, But Marker Middledon for ment Book Shop in Middlebury for mont Book Shop in Middlebury for $9.95 plus tax.

One relatively easy half-day hike begins at the top of the Appalachi-an Gap where state Route 17 crosses the Long Trail, which bisects the state from north to south, following the ridges of the south, following the ridges of the Green Mountains. Park in one of the pull-offs at the top and follow the Long Trail signs, headed south. The trail climbs steeply for a migor so, then levels off in a clearing. Follow the path through the bushes and out onto a sericilite cliff.

Although Vermont is correctly thought of as mountainous, there are long flat stretches throughout the Champlain Valley that make it a cyclist's paradise.

Biking has become a wildly popular sport here over the past two decades, in large part because of the efforts of John Freidin, the founder of Vermont Bicycle Touring. Freidin, the no longer owns the business, has encapsulated his knowledge into the helpful "25 Bicycle Tourin to the report of the series in Vermont," also for sale at the Vermont Book Shop and well worth the $39.5 it costs.

For those more comfortable with the $8.95 it costs.

the $8.95 it costs.

For those more comfortable with some outside guidance, Bruce Burgess, the owner of Bicycle Hulidays in Middlebury (802-388-2453), will provide either a highlighted map or a custom-designed tour for as many days as you wish. Burgess rents mountain bikes for $29 the first day and $20 a day after that. Helmeta cost an additional $3 a and reservations are recumday and reservations are recommended.

Vermont Bieyele Touring 1802-453-4811) in nearby Bristol offers two-day weekend tours in addition to the longer variety, Reservations are usually necessary.

For drivers there is a very scuring the population of the longer variety, Reservations and back again, with opportunities for antiquing, shopping and dining along the way.

Head north out of Middlehury on Route 7, turn right onto Route 17 at New Haven Junction and follow the road through Bristol. Coming out of town, take the second right and follow the road of to the top of the Appalachian Gap, making certain to tup.

pull over end turn around at the top.
Wind down the mountain past Med River Glen and Sugarbush to Route 100, go right on Route 100 to Hancock, stopping for lunch and browsing at Warren Country Store.
In Hancock turn right on Route 125 and climb the mountain, turniciant the significance of the result of the results of the Route 125 and climb the mountain, turniciant the signification of the Route 1. Terms.

ing in at the sign for a look at Texas Falls. Then continue over the mountain, back to Route 7.

Over the years Middlebury has evolved into a browser's paradise. The best strategy is to park some-where around the Green and walk. Nothing is very fat.
Along Main Street the Vermont

Along Main Street the vermant Book Shop (802-388-2061), in rusi-dence at the same location for years, is declared by even urban bi-bliophiles to be a treasure.

Treasures crystallize at Swedish glassworks

A visit to Swe-A visit to Sweden is not complete without a stop in the area known as the "Kingdom of Crystal."

Situsted in the southeastern province of province of Smaland, a rural area with deep blue lakes and thick pine forests the kingdom is home to 16 majo assworks. Among them are Kosta Boda and Orrefors, names that have become ayponymous with the acclaimed tradition of Swedish craftsmanship and design. Visitors flock to the area to see will design.

Visitors flock to the area to see glassilowers at their craft and to take advantage of bargains.
With few exceptions, the local Swedish factories offer large selections of accords that are far lease expensive than first-choice pieces.
In many cases it takes an expert eye to distillipuish the small flows that mark a piece as a second.
But it doesn't take an expert to become exclized about the prices. They are about 50 percent least han first-quality pieces sold in Stockholm and 70 percent less than those aold in the United States.
All the factories welcome visitors.
This year Kosts, the oldest glass.

This year Kosta, the oldest glass-works, is celebrating its 250th anniversary. Kosta was founded in 1742 by two notes generals — Anders Kos-kull and George Bogislaus Stael von Holstein — at the request of King Fredrik I, who was intent on building a crystal trade for the building a crystal trade for the country.

The Kosta factory acquired the nearby Boda and Afors glassworks more than 40 years ago, forming Kosta Boda, in 1990 Kosta Boda merged with Orrefors. But each firm retains its own designers and production facilities.

Now 900,000 visitors wander through the Kosta glassworks every year.

"It's rure that a piece of glass is broken, and you'll never see a 'don't touch' sign here," says Diana Han-sen, a Kosta spokesperson. "About 15 percent of a team's "hathan it assends." she says, production is seconds," she says, adding, "firsts would be enormously expensive if we couldn't sell sec-

Each year the company introduces two new collections. They discontinue others and offer favor-discontinue einem and uter aver-iten for as long as they sell. Amid deafening noise and con-stant heat, workers maintain a rhythmic pace — blowing, turning and shaping pieces of glass. A six-

man team can make between 800

and 900 wineglasses per day.
Unlike most factories, which keep visitors at bay, Kosta lets guests up close to watch and talk to the workclose to watch and talk to the work-era. Ashop is a large, well-lighted warehouse with thousands of pleces of glassware for sale. About 95 per-cent of the pieces are seconds; the rest are discontinued firsts. They include art-glass pieces that are signed and can be bought for a good discount. But finding such are signed and can be bought for a good discount. But finding auch pieces takes luck.

The abop carries all the classic Kosta pieces, including the Pippi line of glasswere, a favorite for 60 years. These narrow, heavy items include sherry glasses for about $27 and champagne glasses for about $27 and champagne glasses for about $38.

A perennial Kosta favorite is the Snowball, a thick, hollowed-out piece used as a candleholder. It's

Among the newest art-glass de signs is the Pandors series. It features clear-glass with a satin finish ndora candlestick is about $75. Whimsical pitchers are about $94.

"It's rare that a piece of glass is broken, and you'll never see a 'don't touch' sign here.'

> Diana Hansen Kosta spokesperson designed by Gunnel Sahlin are very popular, says Hannen. "Only later did we find out that these carci are natives of Arizona," ashe says. The pieces are priced at about $66.

Sweden's best-selling glass, Koatale Chateau wincglass, has delicate beveled facets on the bowl and costs about $12.

about $12.
All these prices include Sweden's whopping 25 percent value added tax (VAT). About 15 percent of that tax is returned when the buyer tax is returned when the buyer leaves the country — under Swe-den's Tax Free for Tourista plan. The price of shipping glassware — especially heavy pleces such as vases — to the United States can be as much as the amount of value-added tax that is refunded.

as much as the amount of value-added tast hat is refunded.
Even so, savvy shoppers often fig-ure it's worthwhile to buy and ship from Sweden.
The ultimate glass experience is a "Hyttail" evening. In this tradition-al fest, participants have dinner in the factory — Baltic herring which are cooked in the glass furnaces.
Dinner is followed by local folk entertainment. Of course, there is time for shopping, Getting to Kosta involves an overnight trip from Stockholm. There are good accom-modations in the nearby cities of Vasjo or Kalmar.

Vaxjo or Kalmar.
For information contact Kosta
Boda, Kosta S-360 52, Sweden or all 011-46-478-503-00. Or contact the Swedish Tourist Board, 655 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017; telephone (212) 949-2333.

ROYAL CARIBBEAN BREAKS THROUGH IN '92/'93.

Now is your golded opportunity to cruise with Royal Caribbean at very special rates on selected ships and sailing dates. Enjoy breakhough savings on the cruise line that sails the world over, to the Bahamas, Bermuda, the Caribbean, Alaska, Europe and Medico, from 3 to 12 nights. Hurry and make your reservations today as rates will increase or be withdrawn without notice.

Cruise Network Luxury Cruises at affordable prices

Farmington Hills Trans Global Travel 851-2232

Garden City Your Travel Planner 522-7020 1-800-873-0722

Livonia Business & Pleasure 478-5525 1-800-878-9832

Rochester Southfield Great Oaks Travel Doneson World Class Travel 652-1004 353-5811 1-800-883-4687

West Bloomfield Cruise Network 855-9750

Prices per person based on double occupancy cruise-only. Prices vary by seaso Certain conditions apply. Low air add-on available upon request.