"Freedom of choice is very im-portant to the voters. Women out-there are very angry." Briggs said." He added that many of the wom-en he has spoken with believe government has no right to in-terfere in their lives. Knollenberg downplayed the importance of the abortion issue.

"It will play a role, but there are other issues. The key issue I hear over and over agait is the economy. Having a job is a right, too. People make their decisions (on who to vote for) on a plateful of issues."

Both candidates said they are running a positive campaign and avoiding personal attacks. They both said they will spend about $350,000 on their campaigns.

The new congressional district extends from Highland to Bir-mingham in the north to Redford to South Lyon in the south.
