all of what goes on in a modern jail."

Hundley also said he would attend more county commission meetings and visit the state government more than Nichols has. "You'll probably see a bit more of me down at Lansing," he said. "You'll probably see more of me at commission meetings."

commissioners because of its committee structure requiring numerous meetings on the same subject and a great deal of time lost in the various presentations before the various committees."

In an interview Tuesday, Nichols also disparaged Hundley's qualifications for being a sheriff.

"Military police education is an interesting adjunct to police work, but it's not a substitute," he said. "It's superficial at best."

If Hundley were the Oakland County sheriff, Nichols said, "He'd hardly know if he was right or wrong."

Qualifications 'superficial'

Nichols said he goes to Lansing when summoned, but "I don't work for Lansing. I get paid by Oakland County, and I work in Oakland County."

And he already spends a lot of time in front of the board of commissioners. In answering a question, Nichols said his most serious problem right now is "moving things through the board of

Proposal A a quick fix that doesn't work

Proposal A will not solve the property tax problem in Michigan...it will make a bad situation worse.

- Revenue cuts will prevent school districts, cities and counties from even keeping pace with inflation.
- Local governments will be forced to cut critical services like police and fire protection.
- Higher tax rates and reduced services will depress development and job creation.

Proposal C the free lunch that costs

- It's another shift and shaft tax scheme just like the lottery.
- The combination of higher taxes and reduced services will scare away investment and cost much-needed jobs.
