In composite vote tallies from all the schools, Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton carried 49 percent of the vote, with independent Ross Perot garnering 26 percent of the vote and President George Bush trailing with 23 percent.

Also selected by students were Republican Joe Knollenberg for U.S. Congress with 51 percent of the vote, state Rep. Jan Dolan, a Republican incumbent who carried 64 percent of the student vote, and local judicial candidate Maria Parker, who earned a lefty 65.5 percent of the winning tallies.

In Oakland County races, student votes would have ousted several Republican incumbents. They cast ballots for Democratic challengers Steven Kaplan for prosecutor, Martha Blom for clerk, Thomas Werth for treasurer, M. Kay Brady for drain commissioner and Al Zolton for county commissioner.

Students voted to retain Republican incumbent Sheriff John Nichols and county commissioner Donn Wolf.

On state ballot proposals, students voted to defeat proposals A and C, which would limit property taxes, approved Proposal B for term limitations, and defeated Proposal D to amend auto insurance laws.

Several students cast ballots for alternative political parties, as well. Individual school results included:

■ Farmington High School — Clinton earned 39, Perot 36 and Bush 26 percent of the vote.
■ Harrison High School — Clinton earned 42, Perot 33 and Bush 20 percent of the votes here.
■ North Farmington — Clinton earned 69, Perot 20 and Bush 19 percent of the vote. North students went for Briggs for U.S. Congress and here, Proposal D lost by only one vote.

■ Mercy — This was the only school where Bush came in second place. Clinton earned 54, Bush 27 and Perot 18 percent. Mercy also went for Democrat Walter Briggs for U.S. Congress, and ballot proposals C and D lost by only one vote here.

Seniors meet students' pumpkin people

President George Bush came to Farmington Hills for a seasonal visit Tuesday, though he wasn't stumping for votes.

The incumbent Republican chief was actually a pumpkin.

And Democrat Bill Clinton was declared a potato and independent Ross Perot was declared an ear of corn.

At least that was the story of "A Vegetable Republic" which Kristin Horner told when she and 20 of her classmates visited the American House retirement center in Farmington Hills last week.

In her story, an unknown named Harold Pressings actually becomes president and brainwashes the country, eventually turning everyone to vegetables.

Sixth graders and teachers Bette Buckler, Debbie Smith and Lisa Cina brought pumpkins they had decorated and stories about each pumpkin character to share with the seniors. The students did the project in teams of four, and one representative from that team made the visit to American House.

Kristin carried her pumpkin, decorated like Bush, and told the story written by she and classmates Jennifer Lis and Wakisa Mwangula.

"We wanted to show that even though we have 81 kids, we can still do things together — and together with the community," said Buckler, who spearheaded the project.

Other student stories included one about a baseball player who fell through first base to Japan, one about a giant talking pumpkin, and others about a fairy, a dancer and a kitty.

The project offered student learning in a number of areas, including the language arts, teamwork, art, community relations, and the experience of dealing with another generation. "We can't get enough of that — the need to value the older person," she added.

Buckler said she was pleased that the American House residents were receptive to the student visit.

"I thought we could come back sometime with a play or something," she added.

The big 100: American House resident Helen Robinson talks to the youngsters about her strong work ethic. She turned 100 Oct. 28.
