Also returning is junior all-around Jonny Sever, senior back row player Katie Mahon and senier setter Michelle Lorenz.

Juniors Maggie Frump and Erin Phelps, along with sophomore Krissy Mahon are players that were brought up from the junior varsity squad late last season who will probably be starters.
Other Felcons who may see action include seniors Run Sandhu and Kim Coleman and juniors Laura McWilliams and Eunia Lee.

Laura McViniana and Lond Lee. "There are some good athletes on the team who are picking up the skills fast," Ingalls said. "They understand our offense and defense. They are also all supportive of each other."

FARMINGTON MERCY

Mercy coach Peggy Spengler needs more education to finish her master's degree curriculum but doesn't need any as the new Marilins volleyball coach. Spengler is currently enrolled in her final course for her mas-

Kolnytis, who left Mercy after one season.

Spengler knows her team well as she coached the junior varsity at Mercy the past six years and also works in the school as the director of admissions.

As for coaching, Spengler's knowledge was gained from playing volleyball at North Farmington, a brief stint on the Michigan State University practice squad and from watching Tim DuBelles, a former Mercy coach.

"He taught me that you are not the coach of a versity team, you are the coach of a versity team, you are the coach of a vorleyball program." Spengler said.

The Morey program has been a successful one. The Marlins failed to repeat as Catholic League champions as Birmingham Marian claimed top honors, but Mercy did win its district title before failing in the regionals.

Last year's Mercy squad featured several top performers who graduated, including first-team all-Observerland performers Shannon Goff and Wendy Wolski, along with Karen Pinkerton, as second team choice.

"We're a young team this season and a very different team," Spengler said. "Last year's team was run by senlors. This year there is more of a combination of seniors and juniors.

"The girls all work well togeth-er. Last year we had a couple of stars but now the talent is more spread out. We will be more well-rounded."

spread out. We will be more well-rounded."

Spengler is happy that the Marlins do have a senior setter, Jill Jarosz. Seniors Angela Assau-and Kristen Kudelko also return as front line players. Senior Marcella DeAgostino and junior Kathy Misteravich will help the Marline as back row spe-cialists. Fighting it out for the final starting outside hitter position are juniors Jill Higgins and Jen-nifer Worth. Both were called up from the junior varsity squad last season and saw some playing time on the varsity. the varsity. Sophomore Mitsi Ruddock and junior Christiane Grant will also help the Marlins on the front row, while back row help will be sup-plied by juniors Meagan O'Brien and Theresa Cisco.

"Our prevailing goal is to play to the top of our potential and be in a position to win the Catholic League, go on to win districts, the regionals and the state. We want to play our best and if you do that, you generally will come out on top."
