Spirited 'Anything Goes' entertaining

MARK S. CARLEY

ning of tremendous entertainment.

Like most musicals of its day, "Anything Goes" offers only the silliest and flimsiest of plots. A broad assortment of caricatures and ne'er-do-wells gather for an Atlantic crossing on a luxury liner. There are gangsters, preachers, businessmen, millionaires, sweet young things and ladies of easy virtue. Mix them all together and watch the results.

The Farmington Players haven't staged a musical since 1985, and the rusty vocal pipes are evident. Nevertheless, their spirited production of Cole Porter's 1934 classic "Anything Goes" provides an evening of tremendous entertainment.

The show is anchored by evangelist turned night club singer Benny Sweeney (Nicole Sutfin) and Wall Street wannabe Billy Crocker (Kirk Hanley). Sutfin presents a tough and lovable Reno, and although she's not yet Ethel Merman, she handles the extremely demanding vocal work pretty well.

Hanley's Billy carries the play's action well. He's sort of a junior con man trying simultaneously to avoid his boss, stay out of jail, and get the girl. And what a girl to get. Jan Sangsard is a perfect Hope Harcourt, pretty as a picture and charming as an ingenue.

As is often the case, it's the smaller leads who have all the fun and get the big laughs. This production is blessed with some great second fiddles. Farmington stalwart Chuck Fisher is appropriately goofy as the terribly unmenacing Moonface Martin.

Public Enemy Number 13. Judie Rosati is wonderful as his sidekick, moll, Bonnie.

If the show bubbles over with energy it's Rosati who provides the fizz. Her numbers "Heaven Hop" and "Take me Back to Manhattan" are showstoppers.

I think, though, that my very favorite is Bob Smith as the pompous but sweet Sir Evelyn Oakley. He gets laughs out of lines most actors wouldn't even know are funny.

The chorus, which must fight with the orchestra to be heard in this acoustically sub-par venue, moves very well under the choreography of Valerie Mould.

Mark S. Carley is active in local community theater, both onstage and behind the scenes. He is a member of the Birmingham Village Players and Ridgedale Players in Troy.
