Chairwoman Lorraine Schultz noted the dinner and auction is for Northwood's Scholarship Fund.

Barbara Tucker, Detroit Chapter chairwoman of the National Women's Board, reports, "U.S. News and World Report rates Northwood third nationally in academic reputation among business colleges and universities."

Theodor Cunningham of Chrysler Corp. is honorary chairman. Jeweler Doug Schubert, serving as auctioneer, will exhort the gathering to bid it up for the Chrysler Concorde LH, the grand auction prize. The car is not to borrow for a week or two but to keep.

One of the auction items that's different is a walk-on non-speaking part in NBC's "Steinfeld" show in a Los Angeles taping. The exciting part of the package includes a round trip flight on American Airlines and use of a Chrysler during the winner's stay in Los Angeles.

An exciting auction item is a ride with Emerson Filtpalld in a Chrysler Viper on July 30 at the Michigan Speedway. Right now, Filtpalld is a hot contender for the Memorial Day Indy 600. Tickets at $125 and $200 are available by calling Northwood at 649-5111.

Previewing antiques

On a beautiful spring evening Thursday, May 6, the preview of the fund-raiser for Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village was set in Lovett Hall of the museum in Dearborn. Benefactors at $300 per person arrived at 6 p.m., patrons at $150 came at 7 p.m., and supporters arrived at 8 p.m.

The Village Antiques Show and Sale is in its ninth year. Welcoming guests were chairman and chairwomen Paul and Marlene Borman and Dick and Linda Kughn.

Tiffany sponsored the preview evening this year. Tiffany & Co. presented an extraordinary silver and glass collection to the museum collection, in celebrating Tiffany's opening in Troy. The pitcher has classical form and highlights bold repoussé chasings of birds in flight.

Four sets of Fords were on the honorary committee. A large Grosses Pointe contingent attends this event, which features distinctive, high-quality selections from 40 top-ranked antique dealers.

Familiar faces in the throng wandering over the two floors in the antique-crammed Lovett Hall included Roy Zurkowsk and his former wife, Lucia Zurkowsk, who were chatting with David and Doreen Hormelin. Jane

chelle Harper, RSM, of Farmington Hills, and Lee Turner of Temple Beth El in Bloomfield Township. Also honored were Bobbie Todd of Oak Park and Nancy St. Amant of Trenton. The women were recognized

Hackett was zipping around with a professional eye to quality. Ruth Johnston and Marcia Avis were reminding friends about the Discovery Ball of which Marcia is a co-chairwoman. Ruth and David Johnston of Franklin chatted with Wilhelm and Sigrun Kast.

Guests went home with a perfume sample bag from Tiffany's and the handsome program book under their arms.

Detroit Country Day School in Beverly Hills held its western-themed auction Saturday. More than 650 people attended, wearing unique versions of western attire.

The bidding really got hot. For example: a GM 1993 Camaro went for $19,600, a 1993 Ford Villager for $21,000, a 1991 New York raised $3,600. A Concorde trip to London topped off at $11,000.

When you have parents bidding at a school fund-raiser, it gets wild.

DCCS chairman and co-chairwomen Jan and Joyce Green and Peter and Pat Rowe were rejoicing over the amount raised by the high bids. Parents Lynn and Isiah Thomas were there, adding to the excitement.

Spring Jubilee

To celebrate Birmingham Temple's 30th anniversary Saturday, the temple held a Spring Jubilee, with 26 top restaurants participating. Ben Morris was Jubilee chairman. On his committee from the temple in Farmington Hills were Marty Bursztein, Helen Forman, Mike Belzman, Janice Levin-Gorelick, Pora Kano and Linda Mandelbaum.

Sheri Nicholas flew in to entertain. The singer-actress is currently starring in a Cole Porter revue "Red, Hot and Blue" at a supper club in Pasadena.

The Village Green in Farmington Hills raised money for the Rainbow Connection recently. More than $3,000 was given to the charity, which grants wishes to terminally ill children. Television personality Ray Lane and Suzanne Jones, executive director of the Rainbow Connection, posed after a chilly dip to help raise funds.

Leukemia benefit Another event for the charity is "Summer in the City" sponsored by Hudson's and the Bess Shoe Co. The benefit to help leukemia is set for Saturday, May 16, at Hudson's Westland.

Arlene decided to take the class. "I forced her into it," he said, jokingly. They asked Carol and Tom O'Reilly of Franklin to join them for the class. "We thought it would be fun to have another couple," Kass said.

The Kassas had visited a country and western bar during a ski trip in Colorado. "Everybody was there," he said about the bar, mentioning that the crowd was all ages from kids to older people.

Of their dance lessons so far, Carol O'Reilly said with a laugh, "I think we're doing good in one department, the Barn Dance, but we could use help in another department, the Achy Breaky."

Anne Marks of Bloomfield Hills said, "I'm the only one of six of us who showed up tonight. My husband has been gone two weeks, and I'll be gone the next two weeks." Despite the fact that she and Craig had to miss some of the classes, "I can teach each other," she said.

The "missing couples" that night were Al and Helen Febbo of Bloomfield Hills and Norm and Danielle Bodine of Bloomfield Hills. "I'm supposed to teach them," Marks said. "They left me to my lonesome, but it's fun." Dewey Benson of Beverly Hills and his wife, Phyllis, originally signed up for the class, but when Phyllis couldn't come to the first lesson, Benson brought their daughter, Kristen, instead. Kristen liked the class so much, she returned with her parents for the second class and signed up for the rest of the series.

"I love it," said Kristen, who lives in Clinton Township. "I filled in for my mom last week and I decided I wanted to continue this."

Her dad said he and his wife became interested in taking the class after watching "Nashville Live" on television. The Bensons had been exposed to country dancing for a long time. "We lived in Texas 11 years but never took part in it because the kids were small," he said.

Phyllis wasn't dancing yet at the second class but watched the class as a sideline. "I had a little surgery," she said. "I sent my daughter in my place. I'm on the floor next week for everybody to laugh at."

Joaquin (called "J") Hailey of Franklin and wife Barbara took the class as a sideline. "I had to have some fun," he said. "My wife and I can enjoy it together. We have a second child to start off to college this year. We're trying things we haven't done before. I'm getting to know her."

One of the couples in the line dancing class is Millie and Fred Minkow of Bloomfield Township. She said when they go to dances and weddings they see people doing the country dances. One of the line dances they practiced. "We saw this at a wedding, but you can't pick it up. You need a little instruction," she said.

Their dance teacher, Stephanie Hindmarsh, works for the company That's Dancing in Northville. Classes are offered at community education departments and recreation departments in many suburban areas, including such south Oakland County locations as Birmingham-Bloomfield, West Bloomfield, Southfield, Farmington and Troy.

3 volunteers from area receive special honors

Three area women are among five recently honored for their outstanding service on behalf of homeless men, women and children in southeastern Michigan.

Honorees include Suzanne Aberly of Bloomfield Hills, Ra-

chelle Harper, RSM, of Farmington Hills, and Lee Turner of Temple Beth El in Bloomfield Township. Also honored were Bobbie Todd of Oak Park and Nancy St. Amant of Trenton. The women were recognized both by the Coalition on Temporary Shelter, for its annual Volunteer Appreciation Day, and by Detroit City Councilman Clyde Cleveland, who presented "Spice of Detroit" awards to each of them.

COTS' mission is to help homeless people return to economic self-sufficiency. COTS, in downtown Detroit, has 140 emergency shelter beds and provides more than 51,000 shelter nights annually. In addition, the Peterboro facility provides transitional housing for 67 single men and women and long-term housing for 22 elderly and physically or mentally handicapped homeless people. At its second facility on West Grand Boulevard, COTS provides transitional housing and support services for seven homeless families with children.
