

Art of fact: Farmington area artist Kegham Tazian, who is a professor at Oakland Community College, has offered to make this bronze sculpture to stand in front of the east entrance of Farmington City Hall. The sculpture would be provided through money raised by the 125th Anniversary Committee.

avored by the 125th Anniversary Committee. A sculpture subcommittee was formed, which includes resident Laura Meyers, Councilwoman Shirley Richardson, Papa, and Reid. They met with Tazian on the project. "We liked this one especially because of the softness of it," said Reid, who is also on the 125th Anniversary Committee. "The gentle lines added a warmth to it." Tazian's work is marked by realism and abstract. He believes the piece encompasses both. The five columns stand for 25 years of existence. He said they also could be interpreted as a protective hand or green leaves of growth.

The faces of the artwork reflect a diverse community in terms of ethnicity, race and age. Tazian said the subcommittee didn't place any restrictions on him. "The four people I am working with are very excited about the project," Tazian said, "and that's a plus."
