Third Graders Write To Judge

Law Day U.S.A. (May 1) will be more meaningful this year for third graders in the class of Mrs. Helen McGlimmen at Botsford Elementary School in Clarenceville.

Recently, while engaged in a letter-writing project, the students wrote to U.S. District Judge Cornelia G. Kennedy, newly-appointed to her post for the Eastern District of Michigan.

Children asked the judge about her new post, some of her duties and, in turn, told the judge what they were doing in class.

Judge Kennedy replied to each child and with her letter enclosed four photos of her office, library and courtroom.

SHE TOLD the class that there are 340 federal judges in the United States. Only five of them are women.

In answering a question as to how a federal judge receives his position, Judge Kennedy wrote:

If this doesn't look like a typical tire ad, it's because we're not a typical tire store.

We don't have to show you pictures of tires. You know what they look like. We don't have to quote prices. You know what you're getting for $9.95.

What you may not know about Capital Tire is that we sell quality brand tires like Michelin and Kelly-Springfield . . . at the lowest possible prices.

What's more, at Capital Tire we make sure you're getting the right tire for your kind of car and your kind of driving. If you're planning a trip to Alaska, we won't sell you a set of tires that'll let you down in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. If you're a mild-mannered accountant with a 1962 Rambler station wagon, we won't try to talk you into a set of wide oval tires.

In plain English, you can believe the guys at our tire stores. You can believe you're getting the right tires for your kind of driving. You can believe you're getting the best possible price, plus the fastest service in town. If you don't believe it, shop around and compare, then come and see us.

That's our story. Expert and honest advice. Fast service, and the best tires for your car at the lowest prices anywhere. We're not a typical tire store. But then, we don't try to be.
