As summer winds down, one type of "back to school" plan is different from others.

different from others. That's the plan to go back to Rooper School for the annual Rooper Invitational Artfest, spon-sored by the Rooper Boostor Club. This year's outdoor artfest is tak-ting place to ann to 5 pam. Satur-day-Sunday, Aug. 28-29, at the school's Bloomfield Hills campus, on Woodward just north of Long Lake Road. Call Rooper at 642-1600 for more information. The ayent is a jurical show and

The event is a juried show and sale of original fine arts. The 86 featured artists come from Michi-gan and 16 other states.

and a hnowkall bush serve as an-chors. Many flowers bloom through-out the growing season and pro-vide color and interest. Spring brings buttercups and hollyhocks, followed by Queen Anne's Lace, black-cycel susans, phlox, losse-stiffe, conellowers, feverfore, pop-pies, day lilies, splderwort, anemonies and more. Pink sedums and lavender autumn crocus provide fall color.

She "makes the rounds" each morn-ing, removing spent blooms to en-courage growth and to keep things tidy. Kasabach likes to try new plants and is always looking ahead to next season. Most of the flowers were started from plants; some re-seed each year, while others die back to re-turn. She transplants from her other garden areas to this garden when she has surplus, or gives it Buib blurb

"It really has a wide variety," said Alien Morrison, artfest com-

"It really has a wide Variety, said Allen Morrison, artforts com-mittee chairman. "We've kept it a fine arts show ... meet some real high stand-ards. That's been part of it (the event's popularity)." Admission is free. Food and re-freshments and demonstrations will be featured. All proceeds will go to the Roeper Booster Club for use in support of Roeper pro-grams. Parking will be available at the Merrill Lynch building nort door to the campus, in the 2100 N. Woodward parking structure. A free shuttle bus will go directly to the artfest entrance. Participating artifet include Kuren Lavens, Bernie Merritt, Howard Nordlund and Dee Wooda of Bloomfield Hills; Joanne Bluu Bellet, Cindy L. Fields McMahan and Bruce Mig-fields McMahan and Bruce Mig-boatman, Sandomfield; Bruce Boatman, Sandy Lentz, Star Mogdall and Constance Fawell of Farmington Hills; Nancy Parker and Dudley Smart of Rochester Hills; Linda Rizza of Troy; and Tom LGaults of Plymouth. Among the media are cley and from accidutor, jewelvy; glass, pathon waving, basketty, wood and paper. "Bixly of the 78 artists last year fare returning)," Morrison said. "We feel that that's a real positive aign.

The Fiber Group, Jim Frahm,

"We have a vary good selection -- photography, emboased paper, we even have a medal engraver this year. The Fiber Group (Dan-ielle Bodine, Jean Brudtinski, Hadwiga Sizekier, Kathryn Raf-ferty, Germaine Smith and Mar-grapet Windeknecht) will be in the show this year. They do fabulous work."

This is the seventh year of the art fair, the second it has been an invitational and outdoor event. It used to take place inside in Octo-ber.

Planning for the next artfeat begins within three weeks of the last show, Morrison said. Com-mittee members see all the art "up close and personal," he said.

The exhibit is the first show Bernard and Wesner had tageth-er, and the first two-person show Bernard had. "I guess at this point in our work it gave us a good chance to see the similarities, the impact both the painting and sculpture had with each other," Bernard said.

said. The exhibit came about after the e gallery director saw Wesner's ork and offered him a show with work and ollered him a show with a painter. "It's nice to have it in as large a gallery as we had down there," Bernard said. At about 7,000 square feet, Herr-Chambliss is "really like a small museum."

Cultural mecca

"Hot Springs was quite the place to be in the '30s," Weener said. "Roosvelt wont there, and Al Capono. (There wore) beautiful lakes and hot springs, all these bathbouses." After the buildings fell out of uss, they eventually were turned into galleries. Now Hot Springs is considered a cultural center for the area.
