

NOVI TOWNSHIP'S

OBJECTION HALTS
12-MILE LIGHTING

Farmington Township Officials Seek Illumination Of Entire Stretch Of Road

Adverse sentiment in Novi Township has prevented carrying through of a proposal to install lights on the Twelve-Mile road in Farmington and Novi Townships; it was revealed at a meeting of the Farmington Township Board Tuesday evening.

Most of the highway is in Farmington Township, but it was sought to have the entire stretch westward to Grand River avenue adequately lighted. Farmington Township favors the project, but Novi Township appears to have felt the expense unwarranted.

Farmington Township officials expressed disappointment at the attitude of Novi Township, because traffic is increasing on the Twelve-Mile road, and there are a number of places where lighting is particularly needed. Supervisor Isaac Bond declared that one stretch of township highway, where there had been three men killed and numerous accidents in a short period before lights were installed, there have been no deaths and only a few minor mishaps since the road has been illuminated at night.

The Township Board voted for the improvement of the Drake road by cleaning out of ditches and spreading of gravel.

A special meeting of the Township Board that will mark the final session for Justice Charles Heise will be held early next week. Justice Heise will be succeeded by Ward Eagle on July 1.

HONOR STUDENTS
FETED AT DINNER

McCarthy, Eleanor Perry, Esther Seely, Winifred Seely, Katherine Redding, Katherine Rueter, Walter Nielsen, Gustav Rozenboom, and Lois Murphy. The speaker gave an interesting address, and declared that "while many think all good students must be bookworms, it is really true that all good students are the ones who have time to play and leisure to enjoy themselves."

Six students were neither absent nor tardy during the year, the following having that record: Olive Grimway, Crystal Van Marter, Frances Miller, Sinclair Gould, Charles Button, and Harry Grow. Olive Grimway spoke for that group, whose qualifications were described in one way as "unwillingness to spend 40 minutes after school because of having one minute to go in the morning."

Outstanding in qualities of citizenship were Lois Murphy, Virginia Otis, Hedwig Schoen, Virla Jean McCarthy, Alice Parker, Esther Seely, Winifred Seely, and Dean Parker. They were represented by Lois Murphy, who asserted that students should consider the place where they spend six or seven hours a day as worthy of the same care as their homes.

Gustav Rozenboom and Walter Nielsen were introduced as valve dictorials and salutatorians respectively. Leaders in debating, oratory, and declamation were introduced, with Mildred Brown as speaker. Miss Irretha Reed offered a vocal solo.

The faculty was represented by Sup't. Archie G. Leonard, who told his hearers that the chief concern of educators and parents is "whether it will do the child any good."

Supt. John Howell delivered the final address and told his hearers that only one out of fifteen students had entered the eighth grade, finish high school. He urged emphasis upon the problem of keeping children in school until the high school work is completed.

American Children as

Frenchman Sees Them

"American children are 'insolent,' open-minded and gay," so writes a noted observer in Comœdia, Paris' paper, after a visit to the United States. "They work without effort, that is to say, very little. They only learn the indispensable. In the big cities many Americans are trained for the rôle of play. They are trained from the first, interesting, jugs-nuts of model traffic. At the age of twelve an American child upholds his own opinion about that of his parents and opposes his 'reactions' to their 'reactions.' They are treated and addressed as if they were adults. At fifteen they go out to earn a living, without losing their insolence and their gayety. They will have known nothing, indeed, about having noticed that they had lived. Quietness and retreat in the solitude of life, preparation for death; those are unknown things in a country where death is but an insignificant detail." —Pierre Van Paassen, in the Atlanta Constitution.

How Is The Real Estate Business?

This is the first question nearly everyone asks me. I ask, therefore, it is a question of vital interest to the public.

Here is my answer. "We certainly think it is improving. Last week we received more calls and closed more deals than we did any other week this year. Second, because most of our Real Estate friends have had about the same experience."

In 1926 one of our clients rejected an offer we presented him of $7,500 for a piece of property on the Farmington Road. In 1926 he paid $700 for it. He says it will bring $25,000 within five years.

Don't be misled. NOW is the time to buy. Remember, nearly every large fortune is made in Real Estate. The result of buying contrary to the trend of public opinion.

Sincerely,
F. DEVERE FLEMING.
