

Writer has desire for adventure

LORENE GREEN

Dear Lorene,
I am writing because I would like your opinion as to whether or not I should return to a previous occupation, in real estate sales. It has been 15 years since I was in real estate and I really enjoyed it. In the past 15 years, I returned to school and got an associate's degree in young child education and then taught preschool and kindergarten for six years.

I am 59 years old and am right-handed. My husband recently passed away. My three children are all married and I enjoy my three grandchildren. There is no one who needs my care and attention now, but my active mind needs a challenge. Please let me know what you think.

I think this writer could probably succeed in almost any field she chose to pursue. A graphologist does not offer advice on assessing a career. She points out one's strengths and weaknesses, then allows the writer to make the decision. One caveat I have is that she check out the current real estate market in this area carefully. It may not be as rewarding as it was 15 years ago.

Today's writer fills the entire page with her neat, legible handwriting. She wants to experience as much of life as she can. She appears to have a strong need to be busily occupied with activity and adventure. Her spirit is ready and interested in helping others.

Currently, however, she appears to be feeling some dissatisfaction in her life. She is ambitious and her aspirations and goals are set at a very high level. In fact, some of them are so lofty they might be considered pie-in-the-sky. Most, however, are within her grasp. Diligence and determination are her hallmarks. She is unafraid of hard work. In situations where she is given approval from superiors as well as subordinates she is most successful.

A very real paradox can also be seen in that she often embarks on a project enthusiastically, but her interest level can subside, if support and/or results are not forthcoming. I realize this is a contradiction to the foregoing statements, but these feelings all live under the same skin and can cause difficulty in arriving at a decision. She may want to consider this before making any career decision.

Some irritation rides on the many slashed I dots here. Most of it is directed outward, toward others, although a small amount is a critical attitude toward herself.

There is a very practical side to this woman. She is neither wasteful, nor a big spender. I suspect she is an astute shopper, aware of sales and good value for her money.

Personal criticism can be offensive to her. It is possible she experienced too much of it in her early life and just cannot ignore or laugh it off easily. Often, she also feels like she is in second place, not numero uno. And while she has matured into a beautiful person, these remnants remain to influence her personality at times.

Home and family play an important role in her happiness. She is basically a conventional woman who receives strength from a traditional background. She adheres to much of her early training, moral discipline and responsibility to family and community.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are all helpful. Objective feedback is welcome.
